WARPLANES BOMB BERLIN AND LONDON

Barrage of Flame and Explosives Laid over Both Cities by Pilots

Waves of German Planes Subject London to Heaviest Air Attack of the War; English Pilots Drop Bombs in the Heart of Berlin

BERLIN, Aug. 29 (Thursday) (AP) — Ten persons were killed and about thirty injured in Berlin early today by British bombs dropped in a raid which kept Berlin under air alarm two hours and fifty-four minutes.

Germans in Berlin and the British in London took shelter in the same nine hours last (Wednesday) night as bombers of the great belligerents struck at the capitals of their respective enemies.

Royal Air Force bombers crossed and recrossed Berlin in that city's biggest air raid of the war. From the heart of the city could be seen a great glow in the sky, apparently caused by a fire set by the raiders. The raid lasted two houss and forty-four minutes.

Waves of German planes roared over London throughout the night with explosive, incendiary and "scream" bombs in the longest and heaviest air attack of the war against the world's largest city.

The British capital was in a state of siege for more than six hours and the raiders continued dealing death and destruction into the pre-dawn hours.

Searchlights reached across Berlin and London skies; British and German anti-aircraft thundered.

From the heart of sprawling London the flash of falling explosives was visible and clearly audible from several directions.

Raid is Spectacular

The boom of anti-aircraft fire reverberated throughout the great city and the raid developed into the most spectacular of the war. Searchlights fingered the sky in greater numbers that ever before.

For a time there was a continuous flash of explosions on the eastern horizon.

While the capitals of Germany and Britain were undergoing the horrors of aerial warfare, the Senate in session in Washington passed the first peacetime conscription measure in the history of the United States.

The bill, providing for compulsory military service for men from twenty-one through thirty years old and giving the government the right to take over manufacturing establishments necessary for defense, was sent to the House for debate to start next week.

On the eve of a four-power conference in Vienna today (Thursday) intended to work out an Axis-style appeasement of the Rumanian-Hungarian dispute over Transylvania, charges and counter-charges flew between Budapest and Bucharest.

Rumania officially charged that a Hungarian plane had bombed and machine-gunned a Rumanian airport at Satu-Mare, in Transylvania; that Hungarian planes repeatedly had violated Rumanian national air

Churchill Is Cause Of Rebellion, French Declare

Acknowledge Trouble Has Occurred in French East Africa

By The Associated Press

VICHY, France, Aug. 28 — The French government acknowledged for the first time today the existence of a rebellion in French East Africa, and blamed it on British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

The extent and military significance of the movement, however, was not made clear.

Chad to Fight Nazis

De Gaulle announced yesterday that Colonel De Larminat, governor of Chad, French territory in the heart of Africa, had notified him Chad would fight on at the side of Britain. At the same time Churchill pledged economic aid to any French territory which keeps on fighting Germany.

A French government communique said today that "necessary measures" had been taken to meet the situation, but did not explain what they were.

It added that "this is not the first time Great Britain has sought to extend her influence under the guise of economic collaboration . . . Without a doubt Churchill is seeking means to justify the blockade to which he has condemned the French civilian population, depriving them of their colonial products."

The government's statement said Colonel De Larminat went to British West Africa, after communicating with General De Gaulle, and there issued a call for rebellion in French possessions.

It was not made clear whether the Chad rebellion had spread to other regions of French East Africa. Disorders were acknowledged in New Caledonia, French possessions in the South Pacific, where the governing council was reported to have sided with De Gaulle.

American Ships Can Be Used To Carry Refugees

Neutrality Act Barriers against Use of Vessels Are Removed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — Neutrality Act barriers against the use of American ships to bring refugee children here from England were removed today but Germany's attitude and the intensification of the fighting left plans for the children in doubt.

The White House announced that President Roosevelt had signed a measure permitting American ships to enter the European combat zone for this purpose if assurances of safe conduct were obtained from the belligerents.

Secretary Hull said the State Department would not act until private relief agencies had made arrangements and had asked for ships to make the voyages. The government, in that event, would ask safe conduct assurances, he said.

A German embassy spokesman said his government would examine carefully any request for such assurances and decide solely on the basis of the dangers involved.

A German news agency report last week described the new legis-

Here's Important Information on Conscription Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — Here are questions which some may be asking about the effect of the conscription bill—and the answers.

Who is liable to the draft under the bill passed by the Senate?

All men between 21 and 30 inclusive.

What are they required to do?

On a day to be specified by the president, they must register at a place in their communities still to be designated.

Will all who register be called?

No.

Who will be called?

That will be determined by a drawing of numbers.

Must all whose numbers are drawn go to military camp?

All except men with dependents and with physical and mental deficiencies.

Are conscientious objectors liable to the draft?

Not if they can prove the good faith of their objections, but they are still subject to a year of non-combatant work or work of national importance under civilian direction.

Are divinity students and clergymen exempt?

Yes.

Who will supervise these things?

Local draft boards, under a national director to be appointed by the president.

How long must the drafted men serve?

Twelve consecutive months.

Are they then free from liability for military service?

No. For ten years they are to be

House May Pass Excess Profits Tax Bill Today

Action Taken by Committee Is Described as "Gag Rule"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. (AP)—Complying with President Roosevelt's request for speed, the House Rules Committee approved procedure today which probably will mean passage tomorrow of a $300,000,000 excess profits tax carrying concessions to industry designed to hasten national defense preparations.

The procedure, described by both a Democrat and a Republican as a "gag rule," would permit none except Ways and Means Committee members to offer amendments when the legislation is called up for debate tomorrow noon. It also would limit debate to two hours.

Although the Rules Committee approved the procedure unanimously, Chairman Sabath (D-Ill) and Rep. Fish (R-NY) of the committee called it a "gag."

The legislation would:

1. Levy a twenty to fifty per cent excess profits tax on corporations.

2. Permit defense contractors to deduct from their taxable income over a five-year period the full cost of new plant facilities installed for defense purposes.

3. Suspend the Vinson-Trammell Act's limitation on profits from war-

Chinese Are Ready To Send Troops Into Indo-China

CHUNGKING, Aug. 28. (AP)—The Chinese government for the first time formally declared tonight its determination to send troops into French Indo-China should the Japanese enter that colony "under any pretext or under any conditions with a view to attacking China."

The statement made by Foreign Minister Wang Chung Hui warned the French government "could not evade responsibility for all the consequences," including loss of life or damage to the property of Chinese residents in Indo-China if "any Japanese military activities" were permitted there.

The statement added that the Chungking government was informed that the Japanese planned to land troops and take other military action in Indo-China.

"China is thus absolved from any responsibility for any consequences," should the Chinese be forced to take action, it concluded.

War Department To Call 55,000 Officers and Men

Additional 175,000 Will Be Ordered out by December 1

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—The War Department plans tentatively to begin mobilization of the National Guard, under legislation signed by President Roosevelt last night, by calling up 55,000 officers and men Sept. 15 for a year of intensive training.

The men, comprising four infantry divisions, four aircraft squadrons and numerous coast artillery units, are expected to enter camp barely two weeks after completion of the last of summer maneuvers on August 31.

Tentative War Department plans also call for ordering out 175,000 more guardsmen by December 1, along with 393,000 conscript soldiers who would be drafted by December 15, should the compulsory service bill become law by that time.

Mobilization Termed Necessary

War Department authorities told Congress recently that guard mobilization was an essential preliminary to the compulsory training program. Congress passed the guard bill last week.

All told, some 386,000 guardsmen and reservists were made subject to call by the Mobilization Act which the president signed last night. Included are 110,000 active reserve officers, 30,000 regular army reserves, 3,500 enlisted reserves and 242,708 National Guard officers and men.

General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, has announced, however, that he intends to call reserve officers to active duty as they are needed on a voluntary basis, as far as possible. More than 10,000 young reserve officers already are serving.

The War Department is proceeding with training plans on the theory that only 220,000 of the 242,708 National Guardsmen ultimately will enter camp.

Law Expires in 1942

The act provides for the automatic discharge of guardsmen under 18. Those below the rank of captain who have dependents will be allowed to resign twenty days after being called.

Employers will be required by the act to re-employ soldiers who apply forty days after completing service, unless the employers find it "impossible or unreasonable."

The law will expire June 30, 1942, unless extended by Congress.

The guardsmen and reservists may be sent to any place in the Western Hemisphere, to United States possessions outside the Hemisphere or to the Philippine islands.

Measure Is Approved By Vote of 58 to 31; Goes to House Group

Requires All Male Citizens between 21 and 30 Inclusive To Register for the Draft; 12,000,000 Men Are Liable to One Year of Training

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — The peace-time draft bill, subjecting the nation's young manhood to compulsory military training, was approved by the Senate tonight at the end of prolonged controversy.

A smashing vote of 58 to 31 sent the measure to the House. There the military committee was already deep in dispute over a similar bill.

In board outline, the Senate's measure requires all male citizens between 21 and 30 inclusive to register for the draft, some 12,000,000 in all. All these would become liable to one year of training, to be spent at any point in the Western Hemisphere.

By declaring an emergency to exist, Congress could hold them in service for a longer period.

In addition, all between 18 and 35 might volunteer for a one-year "hitch," as the army men call it, of training and service. No more than 900,000 draftees might be in the service for training at one time.

Before passing the Burke-Wadsworth bill for compulsory military training of manpower, the Senate added to it an amendment providing for the drafting of industrial plants as well if defense officials deemed that necessary.

This provision was adopted by the overwhelming vote of 69 to 16 after a three-hour discussion in which advocates contended it was wrong to conscript men and yet let some manufacturers "hold up the government" for excessive profits on defense contracts.

To this argument, several senators replied that the conscription of industrial units, with the conscription of men, constituted two long steps toward the abandonment of the American economic system and the American form of government. Soon, they contended, would come conscription of labor to man plants seized by the government.

Specific Plans Ready

Although the bill apparently will not become law for a fortnight, at least advocates said the War Department had long been ready with specific plans for putting the measure in operation.

The details of these preparations were reported to the Senate tonight, a few hours before the vote, by Senator Minton (D-Ind), who said he had them from an officer of the general staff.

Fifteen days after the measure becomes law is to be registration day, and forty days later the first of the conscripts are to be in the training camps, according to Minton's outline.

A schedule has been drawn up envisioning the conscription of about 400,000 men by the end of the year, 400,000 more on April 1, 1941, and similar half-yearly increments until Oct. 1, 1944.

By this process, the military officials plan to have available at the end of five years a total of 4,000,000 trained men in the active service or in the reserves (into which the conscripts pass after their period of service).

First Peacetime Draft In History Is Passed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. (AP)—The first peacetime draft in the nation's history, authorizing compulsory military service for men twenty-one through thirty years of age, was passed today by the Senate.

Action on the legislation, the Burke-Wadsworth bill, now is up to the House where debate will begin next week.

One of the last amendments adopted by the Senate on a 69 to 16 vote would empower the government to take over manufacturing plants when necessary for defense purposes.

Beginning with 75,000 men October 15, the army plans to call up under the bill a total of 3,400,000 in five years. Together with regular army, national guard and present army reserve forces, this would give the nation a "possible army" of 4,000,000 by mid-1945.

Each conscript called would receive twelve months training, then be mustered out to become a member of the reserves. If an mergncy arose the conscript would remain on duty as much more than twelve months as necessary. Draft troops could not be ordered to Europe but could be sent any place in the Western hemisphere or in areas under the American flag.

The measure provides for registration, at a time to be designated by the president, of all male citizens and those who have declared their intention of becoming citizens who have passed their twenty-first birth anniversaries but have not reached their thirty-first birthdays at the time of registration. There are about 12,000,000 in this age group. Only members of the armed forces and foreign diplomats would be exempt from registering, although many of the registered would be put on "deferred" status by local selective boards.

Because of the deferments most of those selected for service would be men in the lower bracket of the age group, around twenty-one through 25.

Army Places Orders for 870 Additional Planes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—Amid continuing controversy over military aircraft purchases, the army placed orders today for 870 more planes to cost $14,410,233.

Following up President Roosevelt's assertion of yesterday that one of the prime objectives of the air program was first to acquire training planes to instruct pilots for a major air fleet, the army announced contracts for 850 trainers and twenty transports.

Meanwhile, further discussion of the aviation picture, which caused the president to step into the debate yesterday, came from the Defense Commission and the navy.

The president declared that 6,361 planes were being built for the army and navy under formal contracts and 3,654 under "letters of intention" given to manufacturers pending final contracts—a total of 10,015.

Of the 6,361 he said were under contract, the Defense Commission reported that 2,889 were combat and 3,472 training planes.

Urging creation of a special senate committee to keep an eye on the defense program, Senator Byrd (D-Va) contended recently that only 343 combat planes had been ordered for the army and navy in the last 100 days. While confirming that figure, the president said yesterday that Byrd's implication was dead wrong.

Striking at what he called "unintelligent criticism," Secretary Knox stated at a press conference today that the navy's portion of the 6,361 planes listed under contract by the president was 2,541, leaving apparently 3,820 for the army.

Of the navy's share, Knox added, 1,031 were combat, 1,489 training, and twenty-one miscellaneous.

Taking a period comparable to that used by Byrd, Knox said the navy had placed contracts between June 1 and August 15 for 1,686 planes, but he acknowledged that only 243 of these were combat planes.

Willkie Says Local Draft Boards Should Handle Exemptions

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie recommended today that Congress guard exemptions under the conscription bill from political influence and place authority to determine them in the hands of local authorities.

The Republican presidential nominee told reporters that local draft boards should determine exemptions because "under that system the administration of the act would be both local and free of politics."

He did not amplify that statement.

Asked whether some provision also should be made to insure that men drafted under the legislation retain their right to vote, Willkie replied affirmatively.

WARPLANES BOMB BERLIN AND LONDON

Waves of German Planes Subject London to Heaviest Air Attack of the War; English Pilots Drop Bombs in the Heart of Berlin

BERLIN, Aug. 29 (Thursday) (AP) — Ten persons were killed and about thirty injured in Berlin early today by British bombs dropped in a raid which kept Berlin under air alarm two hours and fifty-four minutes.

Germans in Berlin and the British in London took shelter in the same one hours last (Wednesday) night as bombers of the great belligerents struck at the capitals of their respective enemies.

Royal Air Force bombers crossed and recrossed Berlin in that city's biggest air raid of the war. From the heart of the city could be seen a great glow in the sky, apparently caused by a fire set by the raiders.

The raid lasted two houss and twenty-four minutes.

Waves of German planes roared over London throughout the night with explosive, incendiary and "cream" bombs in the longest and heaviest air attack of the war against the world's largest city.

The British capital was in a state of siege for more than six hours and the raiders continued dealing death and destruction into the pre-dawn hours.

Churchill Is Cause Of Rebellion, French Declare

Acknowledge Trouble Has Occurred in French East Africa

By The Associated Press

VICHY, France, Aug. 28 — The French government acknowledged for the first time today the existence of a rebellion in French East Africa, and blamed it on British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

The extent and military significance of the movement, however, was not made clear.

Chad to Fight Nazis

De Gaulle announced yesterday that Colonel De Larminat, governor of Chad, French territory in the heart of Africa, had notified him Chad would fight on at the side of Britain. At the same time Churchill pledged economic aid to any French territory which keeps on fighting Germany.

A French government communique said today that "necessary measures" had been taken to meet the situation, but did not explain what they were.

It added that "this is not the first time Great Britain has sought to extend her influence under the guise of economic collaboration . . . Without a doubt Churchill is seeking means to justify the blockade to which he has condemned the French civilian population, depriving them of their colonial products."

The government's statement said Colonel De Larminat went to British West Africa, after communicating with General De Gaulle, and there issued a call for rebellion in French possessions.

It was not made clear whether the Chad rebellion had spread to other regions of French East Africa. Disorders were acknowledged in New Caledonia, French possessions in the South Pacific, where the governing council was reported to have sided with De Gaulle.

War Department To Call 55,000 Officers and Men

Additional 175,000 Will Be Ordered out by December 1

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—The War Department plans tentatively to begin mobilization of the National Guard, under legislation signed by President Roosevelt last night, by calling up 55,000 officers and men Sept. 15 for a year of intensive training.

The men, comprising four infantry divisions, four aircraft squadrons and numerous coast artillery units, are expected to enter camp barely two weeks after completion of the last of summer maneuvers on August 31.

Tentative War Department plans also call for ordering out 175,000 more guardsmen by December 1, along with 393,000 conscript soldiers who would be drafted by December 15, should the compulsory service bill become law by that time.

Mobilization Termed Necessary

War Department authorities told Congress recently that guard mobilization was an essential preliminary to the compulsory training program. Congress passed the guard bill last week.

All told, some 386,000 guardsmen and reservists were made subject to call by the Mobilization Act which the president signed last night. Included are 110,000 active reserve officers, 30,000 regular army reserves, 3,500 enlisted reserves and 242,708 National Guard officers and men.

General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, has announced, however, that he intends to call reserve officers to active duty as they are needed on a voluntary basis, as far as possible. More than 10,000 young reserve officers already are serving.

The War Department is proceeding with training plans on the theory that only 220,000 of the 242,708 National Guardsmen ultimately will enter camp.

The law will expire June 30, 1942, unless extended by Congress.

The guardsmen and reservists may be sent to any place in the Western Hemisphere, to United States possessions outside the Hemisphere or to the Philippine islands.

Measure Is Approved By Vote of 58 to 31; Goes to House Group

Requires All Male Citizens between 21 and 30 Inclusive To Register for the Draft; 12,000,000 Men Are Liable to One Year of Training

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — The peace-time draft bill, subjecting the nation's young manhood to compulsory military training, was approved by the Senate tonight at the end of prolonged controversy.

A smashing vote of 58 to 31 sent the measure to the House. There the military committee was already deep in dispute over a similar bill.

In board outline, the Senate's measure requires all male citizens between 21 and 30 inclusive to register for the draft, some 12,000,000 in all. All these would become liable to one year of training, to be spent at any point in the Western Hemisphere.

By declaring an emergency to exist, Congress could hold them in service for a longer period.

In addition, all between 18 and 35 might volunteer for a one-year "hitch," as the army men call it, of training and service. No more than 900,000 draftees might be in the service for training at one time.

Before passing the Burke-Wadsworth bill for compulsory military training of manpower, the Senate added to it an amendment providing for the drafting of industrial plants as well if defense officials deemed that necessary.

This provision was adopted by the overwhelming vote of 69 to 16 after a three-hour discussion in which advocates contended it was wrong to conscript men and yet let some manufacturers "hold up the government" for excessive profits on defense contracts.

To this argument, several senators replied that the conscription of industrial units, with the conscription of men, constituted two long steps toward the abandonment of the American economic system and the American form of government. Soon, they contended, would come conscription of labor to man plants seized by the government.

Specific Plans Ready

Although the bill apparently will not become law for a fortnight, at least advocates said the War Department had long been ready with specific plans for putting the measure in operation.

The details of these preparations were reported to the Senate tonight, a few hours before the vote, by Senator Minton (D-Ind), who said he had them from an officer of the general staff.

Fifteen days after the measure becomes law is to be registration day, and forty days later the first of the conscripts are to be in the training camps, according to Minton's outline.

A schedule has been drawn up envisioning the conscription of about 400,000 men by the end of the year, 400,000 more on April 1, 1941, and similar half-yearly increments until Oct. 1, 1944.

By this process, the military officials plan to have available at the end of five years a total of 4,000,000 trained men in the active service or in the reserves (into which the conscripts pass after their period of service).

Refugee Ship Arrives with 897 Americans

Veteran Skipper Said No Mines Were Sighted by Officers

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP) — The United States Army Transport American Legion, overloaded with 897 American refugees, royalty and diplomats, arrived safely home today after a voyage from Scandinavia marked by German radio warnings of mines in her path.

"But we didn't see any mines," said the ship's veteran skipper, Capt. Bror E. Torning in describing the voyage from Petsamo, Finland, past Northern Scotland and across the Atlantic.

"Germany gave us plenty of warning daily from the seventeenth of August until noon yesterday, when we heard the last broadcast which said we had run short of

Army Places Orders for 870 Additional Planes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—Amid continuing controversy over military aircraft purchases, the army placed orders today for 870 more planes to cost $14,410,233.

Following up President Roosevelt's assertion of yesterday that one of the prime objectives of the air program was first to acquire training planes to instruct pilots for a major air fleet, the army announced contracts for 850 trainers and twenty transports.

Meanwhile, further discussion of the aviation picture, which caused the president to step into the debate yesterday, came from the Defense Commission and the navy.

The president declared that 6,361 planes were being built for the army and navy under formal contracts and 3,654 under "letters of intention" given to manufacturers pending final contracts—a total of 10,015.

Of the 6,361 he said were under contract, the Defense Commission reported that 2,889 were combat and 3,472 training planes.

Urging creation of a special senate committee to keep an eye on the defense program, Senator Byrd (D-Va) contended recently that only 343 combat planes had been ordered for the army and navy in the last 100 days. While confirming that figure, the president said yesterday that Byrd's implication was dead wrong.

Striking at what he called "unintelligent criticism," Secretary Knox stated at a press conference today that the navy's portion of the 6,361 planes listed under contract by the president was 2,541, leaving apparently 3,820 for the army.

Of the navy's share, Knox added, 1,031 were combat, 1,489 training, and twenty-one miscellaneous.

Taking a period comparable to that used by Byrd, Knox said the navy had placed contracts between June 1 and August 15 for 1,686 planes, but he acknowledged that only 243 of these were combat planes.

First Peacetime Draft In History Is Passed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. (AP)—The first peacetime draft in the nation's history, authorizing compulsory military service for men twenty-one through thirty years of age, was passed today by the Senate.

Action on the legislation, the Burke-Wadsworth bill, now is up to the House where debate will begin next week.

One of the last amendments adopted by the Senate on a 69 to 16 vote would empower the government to take over manufacturing plants when necessary for defense purposes.

Beginning with 75,000 men October 15, the army plans to call up under the bill a total of 3,400,000 in five years. Together with regular army, national guard and present army reserve forces, this would give the nation a "possible army" of 4,000,000 by mid-1945.

Each conscript called would receive twelve months training, then be mustered out to become a member of the reserves. If an mergncy arose the conscript would remain on duty as much more than twelve months as necessary. Draft troops could not be ordered to Europe but could be sent any place in the Western hemisphere or in areas under the American flag.

The measure provides for registration, at a time to be designated by the president, of all male citizens and those who have declared their intention of becoming citizens who have passed their twenty-first birth anniversaries but have not reached their thirty-first birthdays at the time of registration. There are about 12,000,000 in this age group. Only members of the armed forces and foreign diplomats would be exempt from registering, although many of the registered would be put on "deferred" status by local selective boards.

Because of the deferments most of those selected for service would be men in the lower bracket of the age group, around twenty-one through 25.

Lester Greenhawk Is Best Man at Second Marriage of Parents

EASTON, Md., Aug. 28 (AP) — Lester Greenhawk was best man tonight at a public wedding resulting his father and mother.

The father, Walter T. Greenhawk of Easton, and mother, Ruth Evelyn Fickler of Baltimore, were divorced many years ago.

Both remarried, but their mates died since died.

The Greenhawks had three children by their first marriage, Lester and two daughters. Lester's wife was on hand for the ceremony tonight, performed at the Easton Fire Department's annual carnival.

The firemen provided the bride's wedding outfit, bought the license, rang, paid the minister and gave the happy couple $25.

Willkie Says Local Draft Boards Should Handle Exemptions

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie recommended today that Congress guard exemptions under the conscription bill from political influence and place authority to determine them in the hands of local authorities.

The Republican presidential nominee told reporters that local draft boards should determine exemptions because "under that system the administration of the act would be both local and free of politics."

He did not amplify that statement.

Asked whether some provision also should be made to insure that men drafted under the legislation retain their right to vote, Willkie replied affirmatively.

Three Political Faiths Nominate Hiram W. Johnson

California Senator Is Easy Winner; Bilbo Wins in Mississippi

By The Associated Press

Californians of three political faiths have picked Hiram W. Johnson, Republican critic of much of the administration's foreign policy, as their candidate for the United States Senate.

Johnson, Cal.

Late returns from Tuesday's primary elections showed that he had been renominated overwhelmingly by Republicans, Democrats and Progressives.

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, commented in Washington that the result was an "ignominous defeat" for "President Roosevelt's first purge attempt in the 1940 campaign." He added in a statement that the president "undertook to put the curse" on Johnson.

Termed Defeat for F.D.R.

In a recent press conference Mr. Roosevelt said no one considered Johnson a Progressive or Liberal Democrat in the year 1940 and that, while he still was very fond of Johnson, the latter had changed a lot in the last four or five years. Johnson supported Roosevelt in 1932 but has since opposed many of the president's foreign policies.

Martin said the vote gave the Republican party "new confidence" that California would be "in the Willkie-McNary column in November."

Johnson's nomination on three tickets virtually assured his re-election to a fifth term.

Another United States Senator—Theo G. Bilbo of Mississippi was renominated and assured of re-election Tuesday. Wednesday's ballot-counting showed that he had topped former Governor Hugh White by a sizable majority in the Democratic primary. In Mississippi the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

Theo G. Bilbo

South Carolina voted dry in a test of prohibition strength which will not affect immediately the sale of liquor in the state. The referendum, purely advisory to the legislature, was held in conjunction with the Tuesday primary, which renominated five Democratic members of Congress who had opposition.

Democratic incumbents in Congress also won in an Arkansas primary.

Under California law, a candidate may seek nomination by parties other than his own; but to hold other nominations, he must carry his own ticket.

Johnson entered his name in the Republican, Democratic and Progressive lists and captured all three nominations handily.

Unless other names are entered by write-ins or petitions, his only opponent in the November election will be the Communist candidate, Anita Whitney.

Johnson remained in Washington throughout the campaign and made but two broadcasts to the state. In these he said he never had and never would "respond to the orders of any man."

Speedy p[illegible]e was urged by the president and the Defense commission on the ground that manufacturers wanted to be assured of the plant amortization provision and suspension of the Vinson-Trammel Act before signing contracts. William S. Knudsen, defense commissioner, also said industry wanted to know how much the excess profits tax would be as soon as possible.

Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn) explained the legislation to the Rules Committee, said its primary purpose was to expedite national defense.

Cooper gave as his "best guess" that the bill would yield $300,000,000 for 1940 and $900,000,000 a year thereafter.

members of the army reserve, subject to call in crisis or wartime.

Is there any way in which that period can be shortened?

Yes. By serving two years in the regular army, after the one year of compulsory training.

Is there any protection for the jobs of the men drafted?

The bill requires their employer to reemploy them when their period of training is over, unless his circumstances have so changed in the meantime as to make it impossible.

May a man who is called send a substitute?

No.

How long is conscription to be in force?

Until May 1, 1945.

Assorted Jewelry Is Found at Home of Convicted Killer

SNOW HILL, Md., Aug. 28. (AP)—Following up an undisclosed tip that "hidden gold" would be found in the former home of Arthur Collick, Stockton negro under sentence of death for killing a Worcester county farmer, Sheriff J. William Hall said today he found approximately $150 worth of assorted jewelery.

Collick, 28, has been sentenced to be hanged at the state prison Sept. 13. He was convicted of shooting to death Harvey W. Pilchard, 61, during a robbery last February.

The sheriff said that after receiving the tip, he went to the small one-story frame house at Stockton with Deputy Sheriff Crawford B. Hillman and State's Attorney William G. Kerbin.

Behind a section of the eaves in the attic, they discovered a small opening filled with watches, rings and gold trinkets.

A jeweler estimated the articles worth at least $150, the sheriff said.

Hall said some of the articles had been identified and would be returned to their owners.

Railway Express Employes May Go Out on Strike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—A strike involving some 30,000 employes of the Railway Express Agency, Inc., appeared imminent tonight.

George M. Harrison, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, said negotiations with the Express Agency for a 44-hour week had failed to produce an agreement, and that brotherhood district chairmen would meet here Monday to fix the date and time of the strike.

A. M. Hartung, Express Agency vice president, declared that the company was willing to put a 44-hour week into effect immediately instead of the present 48-hour week. He said the negotiations had failed because the union had refused to grant the agency a measure of flexibility in adjusting the new hours to meet local conditions.

A fact-finding board appointed by President Roosevelt early in July recommended establishment of the 44-hour week except for certain classes of agency employes. It also recommended that to obtain "efficiency and economy" the rules governing the application of the 44-hour week "must be flexible."

Physical Assets of Defunct Railroad Sold by Trustees

Galvin represented Title, Inc., of Baltimore.

The property of the tiny seven-mile line, including rails, tools, scrap iron and small parcels of real estate, was covered by a mortgage assigned in 1931 to the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Baltimore for $14,998.

The trustees, W. Clinton McSherry of Frederick and J. Crossan Cooper, Jr., of Baltimore, withdrew a steam locomotive from the sale on grounds an offer of $750 was too low.

The title to the locomotive is held by Miss Louise Sebold of Emmitsburg, a stockholder in the railroad.

Dies Committee Subpoenaes Books

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP) — The Dies Committee, which plans to open hearings in New York next month in an investigation of Nazi and Communist propaganda, today subpoenaed all the books and records of the Trans-Ocean News Service.

Much of the correspondence found in the Service's office, said committee investigator Stephen Birmingham, ended with "Heil Hitler."

In a similar move last week, the committee called for the records of the German Tourist Information Office.

Today's subpoena was served by Birmingham, the committee's chief investigator here, and George Hurley, its acting counsel, on Dr. Manfred Zapp, executive in charge of the office.

Birmingham and Hurley each carried out an arm-load of books and papers which they said they wished to study in advance of the delivery of the remaining material.

Mayor Jackson Is Concerned about Erosion of Constitutional Rights

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28 (AP)—Baltimore's Democratic Mayor Howard W. Jackson said today he was "concerned about the erosion of the constitutional rights and liberties of the American people" and because "this government of ours is spending two dollars and taking in one."

Welcoming delegates to the National Fraternal Congress of America at its convention, Jackson said "you hear a lot about soil erosion these days, and I suppose we ought to talk about it."

He declared, however, that he was primarily interested in discussing the "erosion of industry by government interference x x x

"You may be sure that if the government interferes with industry it will eventually interfere with organizations like yours.

"I am concerned with the erosion of citizenship and local governments because of their dependence upon federal government.

"I am concerned with the erosion of the moral fiber of the American people by their dependence upon government rather than upon their own resources."

The mayor said "our forefathers did not intend this country to be a democracy—it was not the form of government they planned for us x x x they intended it to be a republic.

"I believe that most of the changes leading away from the principles laid down by the founding fathers have not been for the general welfare of the people."

One thousand representatives of eighty-five fraternal benefit societies from all parts of the country are attending the meeting.

AS UNCLE SAM STARTED REGISTRATION OF ALIENS

Aliens crowd the Brooklyn post office as the United States begins registration of some 3,600,000 foreigners throughout the country as a national defense measure. Four months are being allowed for the registration and fingerprinting. Penalty for failure to report or for making false statements is a $1,000 fine or six months imprisonment, or both. The law applies to all aliens over fourteen years old.

Italian Warplanes Bomb Port Said

British Egyptian Naval Base at Alexandria Also Attacked

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 28—Vital Port Said, lying at the Northern entrance to the Suez canal and guarded by the British fleet, was bombed for more than an hour today by Italian warplanes.

The British Egyptian naval base at Alexandria, likewise, was raided, but it was declared that no bombs were dropped there.

The raid on Port Said, the first of the war, was acknowledged in a British communique which asserted that there were no casualties and no damage.

Nothing was said as to any Italian losses.

The British command also announced that a mechanized British patrol of Sudanese troops two days ago successfully raided the Italian frontier post of Adardeb in East Africa, inflicting "many casualties," and leaving the post in flames.

The official communique said an Italian raid on Haifa, Palestine, yesterday caused "negligible damage" with "a few casualties among civilians but none of them fatal."

Axis claims and communiques touching on the Mediterranean and Middle East disclosed a destructive foray by German surface raiders in the Indian ocean and violent give-and-take aerial thrusts by Italian and British naval forces over a wide area.

The German high command said its naval forces had sunk the 6,900 ton Tanker British Commander, described as "armed," in the Indian ocean.

In Rome, the Italian high command declared Fascist fliers violently attacked the British oil base on the Mediterranean at Haifa, Palestine, hitting the railway station and a new oil refinery and causing large fires "everywhere."

Italy acknowledged, however, damaging British air raids from Northern Italy to Ethiopia.

Annulment of Marriage Asked

Heavy rains had made the football field of the Uniontown high school too muddy to handle the crowd properly, promoter Jules Beck announced. A heavy rain fell yesterday and tonight.

Axis Instructors Sent To Vienna in Effort To Settle Balkan Uprising

Rumania

circles, reassured Rumania through her minister in Moscow that she wanted to avoid border incidents as much as Rumania.

That assurance was given after the Rumanian Minister Grifgore Cafencu visited Premier Molotoff and told him that heavy Soviet troop concentrations on the new frontier was causing disquiet in Rumania.

Preoccupied with Russia in the east, Rumania also had trouble in the west and formally accused the Hungarian air force tonight of "real acts of hostility," and announced that a Hungarian bomber had been forced down by anti-aircraft fire after it had made a bombing and machine gun attack on a Rumanian civil airport.

This incident, described in a sharp official communique as but one instance of repeated violations of "Rumanian national air space," occurred at Satu-Mare in Transylvania, the area demanded from Rumania by Hungary.

To Repel Incursions

The government, saying it had adopted a policy of "force" to repel Hungarian incursions, likewise took responsibility for an attack on another Hungarian bomber yesterday.

That plane was declared to have crossed the Rumanian frontier at Sacueni and to have been crippled by a Rumanian pilot.

(In Budapest yesterday the Hungarian foreign office asserted that a Hungarian bomber had been shot down by a Rumanian plane in an "unprovoked" attack on Hungarian soil.)

The government's communique—issued even as Hungarian and Rumanian representatives prepared to meet with German and Italian mediators at Vienna tomorrow in the Axis' effort to settle Balkan affairs—was far from diplomatic in tone.

"Lately," it said, "Hungarian military planes on several occasions have violated Rumanian national aid spoce.

"In spite of all our energetic protests to the Hungarian government these flights have been repeated and Hungarian airplanes have come as far as Brasov, Vintul De Jus and Someseni, where they threw out pamphlets hostile to the Rumanian state.

"In the face of this attitude measures have been taken to avoid by force these incursions. Yesterday at 12:15 p. m., a Hungarian bomber passed the Rumanian frontier at Sacueni and was engaged by a Rumanian fighter.

Pilots Are Wounded

"XXX The Hungarian plane was obliged to withdraw badly damaged and with the pilots wounded.

"Today flights were repeated by Hungarian planes which executed real acts of hostility. At 10:15 a. m., a Hungarian bomber F-225 used machine guns and dropped six bombs on the civil airport at Satu-Mare and damaged : hangar. There was no material loss because the airport had been evacuated.

"This plane tried to get back to Hungary but was forced by intense anti-aircraft fire to come down on our territory near Carei. Hungarian aviators Captain Janos Gyenes and Lieutenants Vietz Gutori and Gyula Foldes were arrested."

In the day, a mixed Rumanian-Russian commission began an investigation of a frontier clash between Soviet and Rumanian troops said to have left hundreds dead in Northern Bucovina, the Rumanian province taken by Russia from Rumania by ultimatum some two months ago.

At the same time, the Rumanian government confirmed reports that a Russian plane, in reconnaissance over Rumania yesterday had been shot down. In still another aerial engagement of yesterday, two Soviet planes were reported shot down by Rumanian fighter craft.

Hitler and Mussolini Rush Diplomatic Shock Troops To Take Part in Four Power Conference

By The Associated Press

VIENNA, Aug. 28.—Germany and Italy, in their chosen role of "creators of a new Europe" and "peacemakers" in the Balkans, rushed diplomatic shock troops to this former Austrian capital tonight for a four-power conference intended to fashion an axis style appeasement of the disquieting Rumanian-Hungarian dispute over Transylvania.

In the old Belvedere Castle, once the residence of Austrian Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg, the Axis diplomats tomorrow will exercise their "united weight" to bring Rumania and Hungary together. Those were the words chosen by the authoritative commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, to describe the nature of the proceedings.

Tonight the route from the airdrome to the Hotel Imperial was lined with dense, cheering crowds greeting the vanguard of the diplomats, the Italian and German foreign ministers and their associates.

The German wireless minimized the character of recent Russian-Rumanian border incidents, laid them to the fact that the new Russo-Rumanian border is not clearly defined, and said it was not likely "anything further will result."

Russia Is Vital Factor

However, there was an unmistakable air of urgency both in the number of Axis diplomats sent to Vienna and the speed of their assembly.

(From outside of Germany, there were strong indications that Russia, missing from the Vienna conference, was the vital factor in the emergency meeting.)

The Germans themselves acknowledged that any serious Rumanian-Russian frontier clashes would make quick settlement of the Balkan situation urgent from a German point of view.

In Rome, foreign observers believed that fear a Rumanian-Hungarian conflict would open the way to Soviet expansion was one of the underlying causes of the swift diplomatic initiative of the Axis.

Hitler received Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazza Ciano, who had flown from Rome, at a "preliminary" conference in the Fuhrer's Bavarian chalet, near Salzburg today, and an imposing list of diplomats prepared to take part in the talks tomorow.

Participating in a luncheon after the conference were German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Reich press chief Otto Dietrich and Italian Ambassador Dino Alfieri.

Ciano, Ribbentrop, Alfieri and Hans Georg-Viktor Von Mackensen, German ambassador to Rome, then took a plane to Vienna to meet Foreign Minister Mihail Manollescu, of Rumania, and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky, of Hungary, and their aides.

Statesmen are Summoned

While the Hitler-Ciano talk was described as merely a conference on "current affairs," an official announcement previously had been made that the Hungarian statesmen had been summoned to Vienna.

It will be the Axis powers' second attempt to settle Balkan problems.

Following a round of individual talks among Balkan and Axis leaders last July, it was stated authoritatively in Berlin that Rumania and Hungary had been given instructions to negotiate and to settle their problems as expeditiously as possible.

But these negotiations, undertaken at Turnu-Severin on the Danube, broke down last Saturday after ten fruitless days. There followed immediate tension, with both nations stepping up defense preparations. The Russian-Rumanian clash occurred at the height of the tension.

New Susquehanna Bridge Is Now Open to Traffic

Governor O'Conor and Other Speak at Dedicatory Exercises

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Aug. 28 (AP) — Streams of traffic poured across the four-lane, $4,800,000 bridge across the Susquehanna river tonight as the completion of dedicatory ceremonies attended by state officials headed by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor.

More than 2,000 persons surrounded the speakers' platform, and a line of cars more than a mile long waited for the bars to be lowered so they could be among the first to pay a 20-cent toll and cross over to Perryville on the opposite shore.

Mrs. O'Conor concluded the brief ceremony by snipping a black and orange ribbon that "barred" the traffic lanes.

Declaring that he hoped the bridge would be toll-free before many years, the governor said:

Delays Encountered

"While it is a fact that tolls must be charged (in accordance with the terms of indenture executed under the preceding administration) I look forward to the day, which I trust will not be far distant, when this bridge is toll free and when no charges will be made to the travelling public.

"Particularly am I hopeful that a way can be found, in the light of the studies to be made during the ensuing year, for concession to the residents of nearby counties who are compelled to use the bridge to a great extent for their everyday needs. In other words, I think there is a distinction betwene the general traveling public which happens to use the bridge occasionally as part of an up-to-date highway on an extended trip and that portion of the neighboring counties which is required constantly to use the bridge, possibly daily, in connection with the earning of a livelihood or to obtain the necessities of life."

Major Whitman detailed a long list of delays in construction since the mile-and-one-half long span was begun in 1938.

The roads commission chairman said the single lane of the New Philadelphia road, between here and above Elkton, would be completed about Oct. 15. He said both lanes would be ready for travel by Jan. 1.

Col. Maurice E. Gilmore, Public Works Administration representative, also spoke briefly.

Bridge 46 Feet Wide

The bridge is 46 feet wide, with two lanes for North and two for Southbound traffic. It had fifty-two piers and contains 16,262 tons of steel, equivalent to 324 railroad carloads, or a train three miles long.

The span, designed by the J. E. Greiner Company, took twenty-one months to complete.

The governor's car led the way across the bridge, followed by a string of cars that kept the cash registers ringing in their small, modernistic-design pay stations.

Officials of Cecil and Harford counties, joined by the bridge, and members of the governor's party attended a dinner in Baltimore preceding the ceremonies.

The governor and party were welcomed by Circuit Court Judges James F. Evans of Cecil county and Frederick Lee Coubourn of Harford county.

General Almazan Says Length of Visit In U. S. Is "Indefinite"

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28 (AP) — Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, retired Mexican army officer whose immediate political future depends upon an announcement by the Mexican Congress, joined his wife, daughter and brother here today and asserted the

The rugged, tanned general was length of his visit was "indefinite," in a jovial mood and posed willingly for photographers outside his apartment hotel, but avoided any reference to Mexican politics, the European war's effect on Mexico, or his own recent contest for the Mexican presidency.

Results of the election will not be known until announced by the Mexican Congress and when this will be, Gen. Almazan said, is known only to Congress leaders.

The general came here by train from Mobile, Ala., completing a trip that began in Mexico City July 17 and included stopovers in Havana and Panama. He said he planned to spend much of his time in Baltimore, but also would meet friends in New York, and perhaps in Chicago.

Tydings and Radcliffe Vote for Conscription

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — Voting with the majority for the military conscription bill in the Senate tonight were Senators Neely of West Virginia, Radcliffe and Tydings of Maryland and Guffey of Pennsylvania.

Holt of West Virginia, Donahey and Taft of Ohio, and Davis of Pennsylvania were against the measure.

Three Political Faiths Nominate Hiram W. Johnson

California Senator Is Easy Winner; Bilbo Wins in Mississippi

By The Associated Press

Californians of three political faiths have picked Hiram W. Johnson, Republican critic of much of the administration's foreign policy, as their candidate for the United States Senate.

Johnson, Cal.

Late returns from Tuesday's primary elections showed that he had been renominated overwhelmingly by Republicans, Democrats and Progressives.

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, commented in Washington that the result was an "ignominous defeat" for "President Roosevelt's first purge attempt in the 1940 campaign." He added in a statement that the president "undertook to put the curse" on Johnson.

Termed Defeat for F.D.R.

In a recent press conference Mr Roosevelt said no one considered Johnson a Progressive or Liberal Democrat in the year 1940 and that, while he still was very fond of Johnson, the latter had changed a lot in the last four or five years. Johnson supported Roosevelt in 1932 but has since opposed many of the president's foreign policies.

Martin said the vote gave the Republican party "new confidence" that California would be "in the Willkie-McNary column in November."

Johnson's nomination on three tickets virtually assured his re-election to a fifth term.

Another United States Senator—Theo G. Bilbo of Mississippi was renominated and assured of re-election Tuesday. Wednesday's ballot-counting showed that he had topped former Governor Hugh White by a sizable majority in the Democratic primary. In Mississippi the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

Theo G. Bilbo

South Carolina voted dry in a test of prohibition strength which will not affect immediately the sale of liquor in the state. The referendum, purely advisory to the legislature, was held in conjunction with the Tuesday primary, which renominated five Democratic members of Congress who had opposition.

Democratic incumbents in Congress also won in an Arkansas primary.

Under California law, a candidate may seek nomination by parties other than his own, but to hold other nominations, he must carry his own ticket.

Johnson entered his name in the Republican, Democratic and Progressive lists and captured all three nominations handily.

Unless other names are entered by write-ins or petitions, his only opponent in the November election will be the Communist candidate, Anita Whitney.

Johnson remained in Washington throughout the campaign and made but two broadcasts to the state. In these he said he never had and never would "respond to the orders of any man."

ships and military aircraft construction.

Speedy passage was urged by the president and the Defense commission on the ground that manufacturers wanted to be assured of the plant amortization provision and suspension of the Vinson-Trammel Act before signing contracts. William S. Knudsen, defense commissioner, also said industry wanted to know how much the excess profits tax would be as soon as possible.

Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn) explained the legislation to the Rules Committee, said its primary purpose was to expedite national defense.

Cooper gave as his "best guess" that the bill would yield $300,000,000 for 1940 and $900,000,000 a year thereafter.

members of the army reserve, subject to call in crisis or wartime.

Is there any way in which that period can be shortened?

Yes. By serving two years in the regular army, after the one year of compulsory training.

Is there any protection for the jobs of the men drafted?

The bill requires their employer to reemploy them when their period of training is over, unless his circumstances have so changed in the meantime as to make it impossible.

May a man who is called send a substitute?

No.

How long is conscription to be in force?

Until May 1, 1945.

Assorted Jewelry Is Found at Home of Convicted Killer

SNOW HILL, Md., Aug. 28. (AP)—Following up an undisclosed tip that "hidden gold" would be found in the former home of Arthur Collick, Stockton negro under sentence of death for killing a Worcester county farmer, Sheriff J. William Hall said today he found approximately $150 worth of assorted jewelery.

Collick, 28, has been sentenced to be hanged at the state prison Sept. 13. He was convicted of shooting to death Harvey W. Pilchard, 61, during a robbery last February.

The sheriff said that after receiving the tip, he went to the small one-story frame house at Stockton with Deputy Sheriff Crawford B. Hillman and State's Attorney William G. Kerbin.

Behind a section of the eaves in the attic, they discovered a small opening filled with watches, rings and gold trinkets.

A jeweler estimated the articles worth at least $150, the sheriff said.

Hall said some of the articles had been identified and would be returned to their owners.

Railway Express Employes May Go Out on Strike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—A strike involving some 30,000 employes of the Railway Express Agency, Inc., appeared imminent tonight.

George M. Harrison, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, said negotiations with the Express Agency for a 44-hour week had failed to produce an agreement, and that brotherhood district chairmen would meet here Monday to fix the date and time of the strike.

A. M. Hartung, Express Agency vice president, declared that the company was willing to put a 44-hour week into effect immediately instead of the present 48-hour week. He said the negotiations had failed because the union had refused to grant the agency a measure of flexibility in adjusting the new hours to meet local conditions.

A fact-finding board appointed by President Roosevelt early in July recommended establishment of the 44-hour week except for certain classes of agency employes. It also recommended that to obtain "efficiency and economy" the rules governing the application of the 44-hour week "must be flexible."

Physical Assets of Defunct Railroad Sold by Trustees

Galvin represented Title, Inc., of Baltimore.

The property of the tiny seven-mile line, including rails, tools, scrap iron and small parcels of real estate, was covered by a mortgage assigned in 1931 to the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Baltimore for $14,998.

The trustees, W. Clinton McSherry of Frederick and J. Crossan Cooper, Jr., of Baltimore, withdrew a steam locomotive from the sale on grounds an offer of $750 was too low.

The title to the locomotive is held by Miss Louise Sebold of Emmitsburg, a stockholder in the railroad.

Dies Committee Subpoenaes Books

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP) — The Dies Committee, which plans to open hearings in New York next month in an investigation of Nazi and Communist propaganda, today subpoenaed all the books and records of the Trans-Ocean News Service.

Much of the correspondence found in the Service's office, said committee investigator Stephen Birmingham, ended with "Heil Hitler."

In a similar move last week, the committee called for the records of the German Tourist Information Office.

Today's subpoena was served by Birmingham, the committee's chief investigator here, and George Hurley, its acting counsel, on Dr. Manfred Zapp, executive in charge of the office.

Birmingham and Hurley each carried out an arm-load of books and papers which they said they wished to study in advance of the delivery of the remaining material.

Mayor Jackson Is Concerned about Erosion of Constitutional Rights

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28 (AP)—Baltimore's Democratic Mayor Howard W. Jackson said today he was "concerned about the erosion of the constitutional rights and liberties of the American people" and because "this government of ours is spending two dollars and taking in one."

Welcoming delegates to the National Fraternal Congress of America at its convention, Jackson said "you hear a lot about soil erosion these days, and I suppose we ought to talk about it."

He declared, however, that he was primarily interested in discussing the "erosion of industry by government interference x x x

"You may be sure that if the government interferes with industry it will eventually interfere with organizations like yours.

"I am concerned with the erosion of citizenship and local governments because of their dependence upon federal government.

"I am concerned with the erosion of the moral fiber of the American people by their dependence upon government rather than upon their own resources."

The mayor said "our forefathers did not intend this country to be a democracy—it was not the form of government they planned for us x x x they intended it to be a republic.

"I believe that most of the changes leading away from the principles laid down by the founding fathers have not been for the general welfare of the people."

One thousand representatives of eighty-five fraternal benefit societies from all parts of the country are attending the meeting.

AS UNCLE SAM STARTED REGISTRATION OF ALIENS

Aliens crowd the Brooklyn post office as the United States begins registration of some 3,600,000 foreigners throughout the country as a national defense measure. Four months are being allowed for the registration and fingerprinting. Penalty for failure to report or for making false statements is a $1,000 fine or six months imprisonment, or both. The law applies to all aliens over fourteen years old.

Italian Warplanes Bomb Port Said

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 28—Vital Port Said, lying at the Northern entrance to the Suez canal and guarded by the British fleet, was bombed for more than an hour today by Italian warplanes.

The British Egyptian naval base at Alexandria, likewise, was raided, but it was declared that no bombs were dropped there.

The raid on Port Said, the first of the war, was acknowledged in a British communique which asserted that there were no casualties and no damage.

Nothing was said as to any Italian losses.

The British command also announced that a mechanized British patrol of Sudanese troops two days ago successfully raided the Italian frontier post of Adardeb in East Africa, inflicting "many casualties," and leaving the post in flames.

The official communique said an Italian raid on Haifa, Palestine, yesterday caused "negligible damage" with "a few casualties among civilians but none of them fatal."

Axis claims and communiques touching on the Mediterranean and Middle East disclosed a destructive foray by German surface raiders in the Indian ocean and violent give-and-take aerial thrusts by Italian and British naval forces over a wide area.

The German high command said its naval forces had sunk the 6,900 ton Tanker British Commander, described as "armed," in the Indian ocean.

In Rome, the Italian high command declared Fascist fliers violently attacked the British oil base on the Mediterranean at Haifa, Palestine, hitting the railway station and a new oil refinery and causing large fires "everywhere."

Italy acknowledged, however, damaging British air raids from Northern Italy to Ethiopia.

Annulment of Marriage Asked

Charging that his bride misinformed him in order to lead him to the altar, a Pennsylvania avenue bridegroom yesterday asked that his two-months-old marriage be declared null and void.

Charles Roy Owens docketed a petition in circuit court seeking annulment of his marriage to Hazel Owens.

Fight Is Postponed

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 28 (AP)—The scheduled 12-round bout between Tommy Speigel, state's lightweight champion, and Johnny Rucker, Pittsburgh negro, was postponed tonight until September 4 because of wet grounds.

Heavy rains had made the football field of the Uniontown high school too muddy to handle the crowd properly, promoter Jules Beck announced. A heavy rain fell yesterday and tonight.

Axis Instructors Sent To Vienna in Effort To Settle Balkan Uprising

circles, reassured Rumania through her minister in Moscow that she wanted to avoid border incidents as much as Rumania.

That assurance was given after the Rumanian Minister Grifgore Cafencu visited Premier Molotoff and told him that heavy Soviet troop concentrations on the new frontier was causing disquiet in Rumania.

Preoccupied with Russia in the east, Rumania also had trouble in the west and formally accused the Hungarian air force tonight of "real acts of hostility," and announced that a Hungarian bomber had been forced down by anti-aircraft fire after it had made a bombing and machine gun attack on a Rumanian civil airport.

This incident, described in a sharp official communique as but one instance of repeated violations of "Rumanian national air space," occurred at Satu-Mare in Transylvania, the area demanded from Rumania by Hungary.

To Repel Incursions

The government, saying it had adopted a policy of "force" to repel Hungarian incursions, likewise took responsibility for an attack on another Hungarian bomber yesterday.

That plane was declared to have crossed the Rumanian frontier at Sacueni and to have been crippled by a Rumanian pilot.

(In Budapest yesterday the Hungarian foreign office asserted that a Hungarian bomber had been shot down by a Rumanian plane in an "unprovoked" attack on Hungarian soil.)

The government's communique—issued even as Hungarian and Rumanian representatives prepared to meet with German and Italian mediators at Vienna tomorrow in the Axis' effort to settle Balkan affairs—was far from diplomatic in tone.

"Lately," it said, "Hungarian military planes on several occasions have violated Rumanian national aid spoce.

"In spite of all our energetic protests to the Hungarian government these flights have been repeated and Hungarian airplanes have come as far as Brasov, Vintul De Jus and Someseni, where they threw out pamphlets hostile to the Rumanian state.

"In the face of this attitude measures have been taken to avoid by force these incursions. Yesterday at 12:15 p. m., a Hungarian bomber passed the Rumanian frontier at Sacueni and was engaged by a Rumanian fighter.

Pilots Are Wounded

"XXX The Hungarian plane was obliged to withdraw badly damaged and with the pilots wounded.

"Today flights were repeated by Hungarian planes which executed real acts of hostility. At 10:15 a. m., a Hungarian bomber F-225 used machine guns and dropped six bombs on the civil airport at Satu-Mare and damaged a hangar. There was no material loss because the airport had been evacuated.

"This plane tried to get back to Hungary but was forced by intense anti-aircraft fire to come down on our territory near Carei. Hungarian aviators Captain Janos Gyenes and Lieutenants Vietz Gutori and Gyula Foldes were arrested."

Earlier in the day, a mixed Rumanian-Russian commission began an investigation of a frontier clash between Soviet and Rumanian troops said to have left hundreds dead in Northern Bucovina, the Rumanian province taken by Russia from Rumania by ultimatum some two months ago.

At the same time, the Rumanian government confirmed reports that a Russian plane, in reconnaissance over Rumania yesterday had been shot down. In still another aerial engagement of yesterday, two Soviet planes were reported shot down by Rumanian fighter craft.

Hitler and Mussolini Rush Diplomatic Shock Troops To Take Part in Four Power Conference

By The Associated Press

VIENNA, Aug. 28.—Germany and Italy, in their chosen role of "creators of a new Europe" and "peacemakers" in the Balkans, rushed diplomatic shock troops to this former Austrian capital tonight for a four-power conference intended to fashion an axis style appeasement of the disquieting Rumanian-Hungarian dispute over Transylvania.

In the old Belvedere Castle, once the residence of Austrian Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg, the Axis diplomats tomorrow will exercise their "united weight" to bring Rumania and Hungary together. Those were the words chosen by the authoritative commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, to describe the nature of the proceedings.

Tonight the route from the airdrome to the Hotel Imperial was lined with dense, cheering crowds greeting the vanguard of the diplomats, the Italian and German foreign ministers and their associates.

The German wireless minimized the character of recent Russian-Rumanian border incidents, laid them to the fact that the new Russo-Rumanian border is not clearly defined, and said it was not likely "anything further will result."

Russia Is Vital Factor

However, there was an unmistakable air of urgency both in the number of Axis diplomats sent to Vienna and the speed of their assembly.

(From outside of Germany, there were strong indications that Russia, missing from the Vienna conference, was the vital factor in the emergency meeting.)

The Germans themselves acknowledged that any serious Rumanian-Russian frontier clashes would make quick settlement of the Balkan situation urgent from a German point of view.

In Rome, foreign observers believed that fear a Rumanian-Hungarian conflict would open the way to Soviet expansion was one of the underlying causes of the swift diplomatic initiative of the Axis.

Hitler received Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazza Ciano, who had flown from Rome, at a "preliminary" conference in the Fuhrer's Bavarian chalet, near Salzburg today, and an imposing list of diplomats prepared to take part in the talks tomorow.

Participating in a luncheon after the conference were German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Reich press chief Otto Dietrich and Italian Ambassador Dino Alfieri.

Ciano, Ribbentrop, Alfieri and Hans Georg-Viktor Von Mackensen, German ambassador to Rome, then took a plane to Vienna to meet Foreign Minister Mihail Manollescu, of Rumania, and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky, of Hungary, and their aides.

Statesmen are Summoned

While the Hitler-Ciano talk was described as merely a conference on "current affairs," an official announcement previously had been made that the Hungarian statesmen had been summoned to Vienna.

It will be the Axis powers' second attempt to settle Balkan problems.

Following a round of individual talks among Balkan and Axis leaders last July, it was stated authoritatively in Berlin that Rumania and Hungary had been given instructions to negotiate and to settle their problems as expeditiously as possible.

But these negotiations, undertaken at Turnu-Severin on the Danube, broke down last Saturday after ten fruitless days. There followed immediate tension, with both nations stepping up defense preparations. The Russian-Rumanian clash occurred at the height of the tension.

New Susquehanna Bridge Is Now Open to Traffic

Governor O'Conor and Other Speak at Dedicatory Exercises

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Aug. 28 (AP) — Streams of traffic poured across the four-lane, $4,800,000 bridge across the Susquehanna river tonight as the completion of dedicatory ceremonies attended by state officials headed by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor.

More than 2,000 persons surrounded the speakers' platform, and a line of cars more than a mile long waited for the bars to be lowered so they could be among the first to pay a 20-cent toll and cross over to Perryville on the opposite shore.

Mrs. O'Conor concluded the brief ceremony by snipping a black and orange ribbon that "barred" the traffic lanes.

Declaring that he hoped the bridge would be toll-free before many years, the governor said:

Delays Encountered

"While it is a fact that tolls must be charged (in accordance with the terms of indenture executed under the preceding administration) I look forward to the day, which I trust will not be far distant, when this bridge is toll free and when no charges will be made to the travelling public.

"Particularly am I hopeful that a way can be found, in the light of the studies to be made during the ensuing year, for concession to the residents of nearby counties who are compelled to use the bridge to a great extent for their everyday needs. In other words, I think there is a distinction betwene the general traveling public which happens to use the bridge occasionally as part of an up-to-date highway on an extended trip and that portion of the neighboring counties which is required constantly to use the bridge, possibly daily, in connection with the earning of a livelihood or to obtain the necessities of life."

Major Whitman detailed a long list of delays in construction since the mile-and-one-half long span was begun in 1938.

The roads commission chairman said the single lane of the New Philadelphia road, between here and above Elkton, would be completed about Oct. 15. He said both lanes would be ready for travel by Jan. 1.

Col. Maurice E. Gilmore, Public Works Administration representative, also spoke briefly.

Bridge 46 Feet Wide

The bridge is 46 feet wide, with two lanes for North and two for Southbound traffic. It had fifty-two piers and contains 16,262 tons of steel, equivalent to 324 railroad carloads, or a train three miles long.

The span, designed by the J. E. Greiner Company, took twenty-one months to complete.

The governor's car led the way across the bridge, followed by a string of cars that kept the cash registers ringing in their small, modernistic-design pay stations.

Officials of Cecil and Harford counties, joined by the bridge, and members of the governor's party attended a dinner in Baltimore preceding the ceremonies.

The governor and party were welcomed by Circuit Court Judges James F. Evans of Cecil county and Frederick Lee Coubourn of Harford county.

General Almazan Says Length of Visit In U. S. Is "Indefinite"

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28 (AP) — Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, retired Mexican army officer whose immediate political future depends upon an announcement by the Mexican Congress, joined his wife, daughter and brother here today and asserted the

The rugged, tanned general was length of his visit was "indefinite." in a jovial mood and posed willingly for photographers outside his apartment hotel, but avoided any reference to Mexican politics, the European war's effect on Mexico, or his own recent contest for the Mexican presidency.

Results of the election will not be known until announced by the Mexican Congress and when this will be, Gen. Almazan said, is known only to Congress leaders.

The general came here by train from Mobile, Ala., completing a trip that began in Mexico City July 17 and included stopovers in Havana and Panama. He said he planned to spend much of his time in Baltimore, but also would meet friends in New York, and perhaps in Chicago.

Tydings and Radcliffe Vote for Conscription

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP) — Voting with the majority for the military conscription bill in the Senate tonight were Senators Neely of West Virginia, Radcliffe and Tydings of Maryland and Guffey of Pennsylvania.

Holt of West Virginia, Donahey and Taft of Ohio, and Davis of Pennsylvania were against the measure.

Wandering Tombstone Back in Cemetery

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — From an unused cemetery, in which are graves of many Phoenix pioneers, a head-stone bearing the inscription, "To all vulger men and all the Gods: Disturb us not" was stolen eight years ago.

The warning apparently affected the vandals, for two years ago the stone turned up at the city outskirts.

A police officer, finding it unwanted, took it to his home, where it remained until recelty when officials of the Pioneers' Cemetery association heard of it.

Today the tombstone is guarding the rebuilt vault of J. H. W. Jensen, picturesque character of early Phoenix.

Dummy Placed in Road Nearly Causes Wreck

ELKINS, W. Va., Aug. 28 (AP) — First large poles were placed across the highway. Then, later, a motorist driving at night saw what he took to be a man lying in the road, swerved his car and hit a fence.

Sol Goldberg of Elkins, father of the fotball star "Biggie" Goldberg, complained to state police that what had almost wrecked his car to keep from hitting was not a man at all, but a dummy.

It was a dummy all dressed up in a young man's clothing—and that, said police, was taking a prank too far.

"If we catch the pranksters," said an officer, "we'll see who is the dummy.

The Forest Softie Gets His Dander Up

PHOENIX, Ariz., (AP) — If you think of squirrels only as soft little animals that collect nuts, listen to the experience of F. Lee Kirby, supervisor of Tonto National Forest.

During his travels Kirby came upon a fierce fight between a ground squirrel and a large black snake. The squirrel constantly was on the offensive, presumably fighting for its young. As Kirby watched, the squirrel tried repeatedly to grab the snake's head in its teeth. Finally, the two, with the squirrel riding firmly on the snake's back, disappeared beneath a stump.

Wallace Speech At Des Moines Will Be on Air

Three Networks Will Pick Up Notification Program

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—The male lead on the air Thursday night will be taken by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. At the Coliseum in Des Moines, Ia., he will be formally notified of his nomination as Democratic candidate for vice-president.

WJZ-NBC and the CBS Chain will pick up the program at 9:15, when Rep. Marvin Jones of Texas will begin his speech of notification to Mr. Wallace.

Valentine Introducer

WEAF-NBC and MBS will come on the air at 9:30, when John K. Valentine, Democratic nominee for governor of Iowa, is to introduce the candidate. Mr. Wallace's acceptance speech will follow. The broadcast will close at ten.

The MBS broadcast will come between halves of the All-Star football game between the College All-Stars and the Green Bay Packers at Chicago. Bob Elson will handle the running account of the game, which starts at 8:30. MBS will pick up Soldiers' Field again at 10 for the rest of the game.

"What Every Man Should Know" now that women have had the vote for twenty years will be Author Margaret Culkin Banning's topic on her It Looks From Here series on WJZ-NBC at 1 p. m.

Mrs. Evelyn Fayrer Turner(who shepherds British refugee children aboard ship, will be a guest on Strange As It Seems at 7:30 on CBS.

Henry Aldrich, of The Aldrich Family, (WEAF-NBC 7:30 p. m.) bluffs himself into the ring with a carnival wrestler—with surprising results.

CBS' Vox Pop crew travels into a broadcasting station at 6:30 and many of those familiar voices will "step out of character" for a few minutes.

Cheese in a Tunnel

WALHALLA, S. C. (AP) — After seventy-odd years a use has been found for the tunnel in Stumphouse mountain. The tunnel, dug in an ambitious railroad construction program, never was completed. Now the Clemson College dairy department has leased it for the manufacture of roquefort cheese.

And Seven Lives, Too?

DALHART, Tex. (AP) — The number seven seems to be a fateful one for the cat of Mrs. W. S. Good. It was born on the seventh day of the sevenuth month in 1937 and has the outline of the number seven on its side. Recently the cat gave birth to her seventh litter of kittens.

Willkie a Likely Winner in Maryland

WILLIAM H. LLOYD, Dorchester county Republican member of the state House of Delegates, predicts that Wendell L. Willkie will carry Maryland over President Roosevelt at the fall election by 30,000 votes.

There are many indications that this prediction has solid ground. Many old-time Democrats are swinging over to Willkie, some because they sense the danger to American institutions and traditions in the third term and some because they realize the costly failure of the New Deal experimentation.

Lloyd has based his prediction on information obtained in the last month while he was making a tour of most of the counties of the state and of all of the legislative districts of Baltimore city.

"The results of President Roosevelt's attempt to purge our distinguished senator, Millard E. Tydings, became a boomerang in the last campaign," Lloyd said.

"That move on the part of the president has undoubtedly caused the independent people of Maryland to realize the importance in this election of electing men to office who are not personally ambitious to continue themselves in office for the balance of their lives, as Mr. Roosevelt obviously is seeking."

It was pointed out by the Eastern Shore delegate that he noticed in Southern Maryland "a large change of sentiment of all classes of people against the third term and against the continuance of the obvious failing of the New Deal administration."

Republican party workers, however, must not take too much for granted in the Willkie surge now evident throughout the state. The New Deal machine is a powerful affair and it will be aided by the use of federal funds in work jobs. Thus, there are heavy obstacles to overcome.

One thing that would aid very much in clinching Maryland for Willkie would be his personal appearance in the state, as suggested by former Governor Harry W. Nice, who is urging the national Republican organization to arrange for visits here by the nominee. Willkie's powerful personality, his convincing sincerity and his appealing forthright attitude on public affairs would be a powerful influence in swinging the state to him, and it is to be hoped that the national party leaders will arrange to bring him to the Free state. Maryland's electoral vote may be of decisive importance in this election, as Mr. Nice has stated.

How Much Does a Squirrel Weight?

HOW MUCH does a squirrel weigh? Enlightenment thereon is contained in a bulletin of the West Virginia State Conservation Commission, which quotes figures indicating that the animal may weigh anywhere between eight ounces and a pound and a half. The gray squirrels killed by hunters in that state, however, average about a pound each.

Of 223 squirrels killed in Seneca State Forest last hunting season the heaviest weighed twenty-three ounces and the lightest, a female, weighed eight ounces. No male weighed less than eleven ounces. Nearly half of the male squirrels weighed between nineteen and twenty-one ounces and one out of five weighed twenty-three ounces. Of eighty-eight females, forty-five weighed between fourteen and seventeen ounces. These studies showed that adult male squirrels usually weigh nineteen ounces or more. Those under nineteen ounces generally are young squirrels.

Anyway, even if they are small, quirrel meat is a delicacy and it is a great pity there is such a scarcity of it, and that it is pretty costly. In order to obtain it, one must become a hunter, and pay license fees, and equip himself accordingly. Why the squirrel couldn't be domesticated and raised in quantity for sale as a table meat seems queer in a country where everything seems to be accomplished to gratify the taste. The reason probably is that the meat of the animal would be quite different unless it had the run of the woods, although that, too, could easily be provided.

Vitamins Finally Get Into Our Driving

FOOD as a preventive of night traffic accidents is not as fantastic as it sounds, according to an article by William Ullman, noted writer on automotive topics, in the current issue of Keystone Motorist.

Declaring that recent investigations by scientists in the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, have proved that insufficient vitamin A in food renders one subject to night blindness or inability to see in dim light, Ullman says the bureau is rounding out its studies to determine just how much of the vitamin the human body needs daily under normal conditions.

"While the full benefits of these studies," the article continues, "will apply to all, they are of particular importance in the crusade against death and injury on the highways. This is brought about by the fact that nearly sixty per cent of traffic fatalities occur at night, when only about one-third of the driving is done.

"Results already flowing from the investigation indicate that drivers and pedestrians who habitually live on a low vitamin A diet do not readily regain normal vision after staring into the bright lights of approaching automobiles. Moreover, low vitamin A diets not only cause night blindness but also narrow the field of vision. Even in daylight drivers on such diets do not have the proper side range of vision to prevent them from cutting into cars running by their side or to enable them to see cross traffic approaching when near intersections. And at night, they are less likely to see pedestrians walking along the side of the road."

While the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, is of the opinion that persons who have difficulty with night driving should obtain competent professional advice relating to proper diet, it quotes the federal investigators as saying common sources of vitamin A are yellow and leafy green vegetables, egg yolks, whole milk, and orange and tomato juice.

A Holiday Warning That Should Be Heeded

SAFETY ORGANIZATIONS, state motor vehicle commissioners, automobile clubs and allied agencies have unloosed the annual flood of warnings against motoring perils which attend the Labor day week-end. Indeed, the number of statements will be matched only by the fatalities among the motorists at whom they are directed. For warnings and statistics seem to make little headway in a nation which accepts with callous disregard a highway death toll of 100 a day.

Last Labor day week-end 250 persons perished by automobile, many of them innocent victims of fools behind steering wheels. There were the usual preholiday statements, the mortality figures were paraded again. Drivers were warned not to cut in, to take it easy at grade crossings, not to pass on curves or hills, not to speed nor hog the road and not to drink and drive. All sound advice and the press patiently played it up again. The result? Misery for 250 families into which death rode on rubber tires.

There may be just as much misery this year. There are—sickening thought—several hundred persons well and strong today who may be dead by Tuesday despite all the sermons on highway safety ever written.

Trotsky Case Emphasizes Error of Recognition

One angle of the assassination of Rat Trotsky in Mexico that has not been commented upon in this country is the fact that the assassin, one Jackson alias so-and-so, went to Mexico to do the job from the United States.

If, as none doubts, Jackson was hired for the job by Stalin, from whom did he get his instructions and his pay? Who, in the United States, hires assassins for Stalin? There is, of course, only one answer.

If Stalin's agent in the United States can hire assassins to kill Stalin's enemies in Mexico, what is to prevent this same fifth columnist from engaging in assassination and subversive activities in the United States?

Most Americans still feel that the Roosevelt administration made a grave error in recognizing Russia, thus allowing Stalin's ambassador to be in Washington, where activities of Uncle Sam's gigantic efforts to arm against the menace of Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini are concentrated. This angle of the Trotsky case substantiates that belief.

Baseball Classic Will Long Endure

IT MAY MEAN LITTLE to the average reader to say that Ernest Lawrence Thayer, at the age of 77, has "struck out." But it will mean much to say that the end has come for the man who wrote "Casey at the Bat."

In 1888, when Thayer launched a brief career as a writer on The San Francisco Examiner, he dashed off, in a couple of hours, the most famous poem associated with the great national pastime. He was among the single song writers. He never wrote anything else that was even remembered, much less as good as "Casey."

The late De Wolf Hopper, of comic opera fame, began reciting it as an extra number until it became a part of practically every performance he gave. The lines crept into the anthologies and were memorized by urchins in the bleachers.

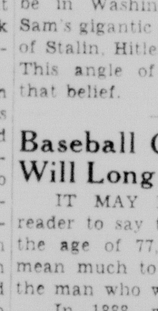
The classic of baseball will probably endure long after the name of Ernest Thayer is forgotten.

In raising the third-term issue Roosevelt created the biggest emergency in his life.

The Letter a Wife Wrote

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Money and temperament separated a man and his wife and for many months it seemed that the breach between them would never be closed. . . . But they were wiser than most human beings and after a while they healed their wounds and came together again in a new happiness, based this time on mutual understanding.



Marshall Maslin

On the eve of this new life the wife wrote a letter from which these three paragraphs are taken. They were sent to me by one who signed no name and I do not know whether it was the man or the wife who sent it. (Although I suspect it was the man). She stated her case in this way:

"You really married a hell of a wife. I know so many of my weaknesses, and there are probably dozens more I haven't yet found. I just haven't the lightness to make me a social asset at large parties, yet I can manage things. I enjoy people en masse, yet am fond of very few. I believe I have certain rights to happiness by virtue of my brains, body and breeding, but I also believe in the responsibilities these rights entail.

"I'm too stubborn, sensitive and old-fashioned in spots. I have a touch of the Scotch mystic, the Irish dreamer, and the New England business man. Aside from that, I need ten hours' sleep a day. I have a reasonably good record as a business woman, and a sad tendency to put off things until the last minute—then somehow get them done. I'm not half as smart as some people think I am, but because I have a gift for people, I can get away with it.

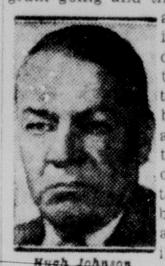
"I ask only a full, productive and interesting life. I will always give combative loyalty when loyalty is given me, within the code of ethics. If I can pass a code of ethics, plus loyalty, on to our youngster she will go a long way."

And I think that in these sentences I read honesty, self-knowledge and scrupulous determination to be fair. Also that I see in this letter the beginning of a new life for a man and a woman who have opened their hearts fearlessly to each other and henceforth will not be divided.

I wish I knew this couple.

Arms Program Is Poorly Managed, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON



Hugh Johnson

NEW YORK CITY—The delay about getting the armament program going and this dangerous talk about industrialists charging back on accepting contracts because they want exhorbitant profits is almost wholly due to bad planning of the effort in the beginning and bad organization and direction of it now.

This business of contracting to make an absolutely new unit—like a tank—is a fearful and intricate thing. Laying out a production plan for a standard type of automobile, for example, is duck soup in comparison.

Cost Hard to Figure

In the latter case you can figure very closely on the cost of those parts of the final assembly that you will not make yourself but buy from perhaps as many as 200 suppliers. You can figure that because those parts are near enough to standard for the manufacturer of them to know and tell you to the fraction of a cent the price you must figure in your cost.

You know your own production and assembly costs from experience. Your own profit, you will figure largely on your estimates of production—which is the only real gamble because it depends on sales. It sometimes costs half as much per unit to make 200,000 of a complicated product as it would cost to make one unit in a 10,000 schedule and perhaps ten times as much per unit to make only 1,000. That is the vast saving and economy of mass production of standardized units.

Much of this war production misses that whole pattern entirely. The designs are new and highly specialized. While the quantities seem huge—like 50,000 airplanes—they are chicken feed compared to a year's production in a single factory of, say, automobiles.

New Approach Needed

Furthermore, "50,000 airplanes" is a very misleading term. It includes everything from cheap light training planes to giant bombers—items so different that it is like saying "50,000 vehicles" when you mean everything from a streamlined train to a little kiddie-car and a wheelbarrow. Such a program is a bewildering complex of vastly varying units in relatively small production runs for each type. Old commercial standards are no good. This problem needs a completely new approach.

In such a mass every manufacturer is up against it—and so are the twenty to two hundred suppliers and sub-contractors. It is almost impossible to figure costs or accurately to set a price and know whether the small percentage included for profit will turn out to be exhorbitant or bring a staggering or even fatal loss.

The much publicized case of subcontractors who stopped a willing prime contractor on costs because they could get British business without any American labor or profit limitations is another instance of poor organization and direction of the whole armament effort.

Urges One Man Authority

The World war experience clearly proved that what this situation needs is some one man in authority over the whole production effort and an organization of industry itself in the various trade groups. It also requires all foreign buying to strain through the same control. Then, when a production problem comes up, all the purchasers of that type (foreign and domestic) and all the sellers or manufacturers (contractors and sub-contractors) can be seated around the same table, all conflicts composed and all difficulties ironed out.

Prices offered by other powers can be put in step with ours and deliveries arranged with the least interference. There is no guess or theory about that and it is not so difficult as it sounds. It was all successfully done in 1918.

The objection has been "too much authority in one executive." It isn't half the authority that the president wants to put in the man he laughingly calls "Jesse James—I mean Jones" by making him Pooh-Bah of Commerce and all the lending activities of government.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Island of Trinidad Is Seen As Most Desirable for Panama Canal Defense

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Perss Columnist

Trinidad, one of Britain's Carribbean islands that Uncle Sam may get title to, or a ninety-nine-year lease of, is spoken of by American strategists as the most desirable of all available footholds in our southeastern seas for the Panama canal's defense against raiders from across the Atlantic.

Bermuda, also suggested as an island we perhaps shall gain possession of, is pretty good, too, but its geography isn't quite as favorable as Trinidad's.

And possibly we'll get Newfoundland likewise. Naturally, though, Newfoundland won't be worth a hoot so far as the Panama canal's concerned, however valuable it may be for our New England coast's protection.

Trinidad is just off Venezuela's waterfront, right at the mouth of the Orinoco. Not only is it a handy spot from which to keep an eye on Panama; it's a convenient place for us to operate from in the interests of the Brazilian coast's defense, as far southward as the point where Brazil takes its maximum bulge out into the Atlantic. It's there that some observers think the Nazis probably will try to effect a landing if they ever do attempt to establish themselves in the western hemisphere.

Port of Spain

Port of Spain is Trinidad's metropolis. It boasts a beautiful harbor—beautiful to look at and beautiful from a shipping standpoint. It's large and deep and, at its entrance, it shrinks into a pretty narrow channel, known as the Dragon's Jaws, which it would be the easiest thing in the world to fortify impregnably.

That harbor should be elegant for naval purposes.

The island's interior is mostly volcanically mountainous—smallish mountains but exceedingly steep ones. Fortunately they're extinct, in their volcanic capacity, so there are no eruptions to worry about.

But, mixed in among the mountains, are several perfectly flat areas, precisely adapted to utilization as aviation fields.

Oh, it's a dandy island for military adaption.

And asphalt abounds in the backcountry—big lakes of it. The stuff should be a commercial asset to us, if we acquire the place.

At a guess, I'd say that about eighty-five per cent of Trinidad's population is negro.

A Negro Doctor

When I put into Port of Spain a good many years ago, on my way home from Buenos Aires, my little daughter was suffering from quite a severe hurt, due to an accident on shipboard. Needing a physician, I asked the port authorities to recommend one. "By all means," they said unitedly, "see Dr. Laurence. He's far the best medico in Trinidad." I consulted him.

He was as black as the ace of spades. It somewhat flabbergasted me. He did a dandy job, though. I visited a drug store. Coons manned it exclusively. A colored reporter interviewed me. Then I went into a tap room. The bartender was white, but a group of African customers, recognizing me as a stranger, chummed up with me hospitably.

Here in the U. S. A. that kind of thing doesn't go, but you soon get used to it in Trinidad. You do in northern Brazil, too. In southern Brazil and farther to the southward there are racial distinctions, but there aren't any as far down the coast as Rio de Janiero or thereabouts.

Not So Bad, Either

The commingling isn't as objectionable as one might imagine, either.

Here at home most of us wouldn't care to be seen associating socially with another race; I might like 'em, but it would make me conspicuous.

But in Port of Spain or Para or Rio nobody would think a darned thing about it. It simply would be taken for granted; all over the place everybody's been doing it.

It makes a difference with the negroes also.

In the U. S. A. a negro has an inferiority complex. Either he's respectful, or, if not, he tends to be "sassy," to show that he's as good as anybody.

Down in Trinidad or Brazil he assumes that his equality with other folks is recognized and doesn't consider that he has to put on any particular airs to demonstrate it. If you don't want to mix with him, he doesn't care shucks, but goes his own way, same as two white men do to one another if they haven't anything in common.

English is the language at Port of Spain—the English kind, not the American version of it.

Trinidad never has been a tourist resort, like Bermuda, but doubtless it can be developed into one. It's a lovely place, with a lovely climate. The natives equally are in favor of English and American money—all they can get of either.

Marietta Paper Out for Willkie

Editor, a Lifelong Democrat, Holds New Deal Is Not Democratic

"Why Democrats Quit Roosevelt" is the heading of an editorial in the Marietta, O., Times, in which the editor, Frank McKinney, a lifelong Jeffersonian Democrat, takes his leave of the third-term New Deal party and announces that he will support Wendell Willkie for president.

"Giving reasons for adding his name to the growing list of Democrats who have declared that they cannot support President Roosevelt for a third term," it says, in parts, "former Governor George White might have been speaking for thousands of less prominent members of his party as well as for himself. * * * He has finally concluded, as many thoughtful persons have done, that irreparable damage to the nation and its institution might result from the continuation of this administration. * * *

"None of the Democratic leaders who announce their opposition to President Roosevelt feel that they are leaving their party. Instead they are trying to save the party, to preserve its principles and its traditions, to which they have been faithful. They are not bolting the Democratic party, but they are trying gto save the party from Roosevelt and the New Deal, who long ago definitely deserted the party. Roosevelt and the New Deal have not been truly Democratic for eight years.

"There is only one way in which they can bring about the change they believe is imperative. It is to vote for Wendell Willkie and ask their friends and supporters to do the same."

Travel in West Virginia

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

In West Virginia you can see America at her best. This beautiful state stands almost on the threshold of the world's busiest market places, having a diversity of scenery and of natural recreational facilities, uncrowded and unspoiled; where one can "look into the hills whence cometh my strength;" to mountains covered with forests where tumbling rivers and mountain streams lead you to natural wonders, and observe amid these pleasures the opportunities for new industry, enterprise and investment, says a bulletin issued by the state road department.

The Indians and the early settlers of the Tidewater and Piedmont, Virginia, looked first upon the scenic wonders and health giving waters in the hills of West Virginia. Later, pioneers migrating westward, blazed trails that in years to come became roads and are today smooth paved highways. Midsummer is a lovely time to travel in West Virginia, when the heavy foliage of the forest trees cast cool shadows and the crystal mountain streams invite you to enjoy a swim; when the golden ripe fields of grain are at their best and the twilights are long and peaceful. A tour of West Virginia reveals a state of rich serenity, of peace and character and history and beauty.

Broomsticks and Lead Pipe

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

The only purpose of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, or so its proponents would have us believe, is to increase materially the size of the army in the interest of national defense. The opponents of the bill also desire to increase the size of the army but believe that this can be done without conscription, in an American way.

Sucha way is the proposal of Senator Taft for a volunteer corps of 1,500,000 men, trained for one year at army pay of $30 a month. Senator Taft believes that such a plan would assure the United States of an adequate army. Immediately the answer flies back from the conscription devotees that "it won't work." The only reason given is that volunteers have been tried and are not forthcoming. But they have been forthcoming at the rate of 400,000 a year and enlisting for a three-year period. The Burke-Wadsworth bill does not propose to draft more than 800,000 men in the next twelve months.

Meantime the regular army, now conducting maneuvers, is supplying its men with broomsticks and lead pipe for rifles and artillery, and substituting trucks for tanks, because it does not have the equipment needed. Instead of adding 400,000 more broomstick-wielders this year, as the conscriptionists would have it, why not try the voluntary enlistment system first, with certain changes, and see if it will work, before damning it outright as a failure without trial?

Mannish Garb For the Girls Is Again the Vogue

BY EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

It was in the summer of 1919 the college girls suddenly went in for mannish styles. They started bobbing their hair and wearing clothes of a straight-line cut and stories of their hoydenish doings came from the campus and the parties.

Some old sobersides, the president of a tank college somewhere, saw in all a backwash of the war and began the girls to get back to their frills and flipperies. Dominies and other pious folk here and there and everywhere took to scolding the girls without any noticeable effect, of course. They kept on with the style poaching until they got a new other whim and went back to their cutie styles.

Here they go again. News stories are that sweaters, socks and shirts are hot numbers in the smart shops which, nominally at least, handle feminine apparel. The more unmistakably mannish the garment the bolder the garm, as the girls step up for the fall semester.

Favorite Items

Favorite items are brogan shoes, tailored flannel shirts that button at the wrists, turkey red wraps around jumpers, red and yellow socks and "beanie" head-pieces. They demand plenty of pockets. We will note the passing of the handbag if this keeps up.

Interesting, in contrast to 1919, is the fact that nobody scolds the girls this time. The elders of our time along with those who wanted to change the course of the Gulf Stream, seem ready to let nature takes its course. That seems to be a good idea, so far as women are concerned.

The late Lucy Page Gaston of Chicago, who put in a long life desperately fighting cigarette smoking found that out. There is no evidence that years of public outcry against women smoking had the slightest effect. Men, more than women, perhaps, know when they are licked.

Mr. Beebe Heartbroken

Currently, the only pained cry of distress about style trends is the heart-broken wail of Mr. Lucius Beebe, but it is men rather than women who wound him so deeply. Mr. Beebe is shaken right down to the instep by men going around town in slacks. His phillipic against slacks might, in vehemence and impassioned eloquence, take its place along with Cicero's oration against Catalina. He also is shattered by the prevalence of hatless men, but that menace, he thinks, is passing.

Unhappily, it would seem that the world has been too preoccupied with war, famine, pestilence, all the plagues of the litany in fact, to be aware of this new peril until Mr. Beebe bared the evil which stalks in our city streets.

Offense Against Decorum

Wt didn't quite follow Mr. Beebe as to the basic moral turpitude in wearing slacks, but the main idea seems to be that such garments constitute an offense against decorum which ought to bring swift and summary punishment. Mr. Beebe thanks the high gods that "neither the financial district nor Park avenue has yet encountered this gratuitous vulgarity." Since the days of Ward McAllister and Sergeant Cram, it hasn't been so easy to keep the compass of decorum as it was then.

Mr. Beebe, while still a young man, has heavy responsibilities in the field, and no doubt longs for the good old days when every thing was under control. I can remember when there was quite a blast in the newspapers because some chap took off his coat in a hot day in a good restaurant. That ended that. The pharisees "made broad the hems of their garments," and advertised their piety by their phylacteries.

Not a Social Mark

This decorum was in no way revealing as to their social worth. No more revealing were the elaborate wardrobes of Berry Wall and Diamond Jim Brady, back in the days of decorum—which, incidentally, were days of a much more "gratuitous vulgarity," then this way of slack suits. Then and as now there was plenty of dressed up vulgarity.

We hope Mr. Beebe don't challenge us to a duel, but we've been rather pleased about the way men are at least getting a dash of color and variety into their clothes, even if it is a bit too informal to suit the boulevardiers.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Willkie a Likely Winner in Maryland

WILLIAM H. LLOYD, Dorchester county Republican member of the state House of Delegates, predicts that Wendell L. Willkie will carry Maryland over President Roosevelt at the fall election by 30,000 votes.

There are many indications that this prediction has solid ground. Many old-time Democrats are swinging over to Willkie, some because they sense the danger to American institutions and traditions in the third term and some because they realize the costly failure of the New Deal experimentation.

Lloyd has based his prediction on information obtained in the last month while he was making a tour of most of the counties of the state and of all of the legislative districts of Baltimore city.

"The results of President Roosevelt's attempt to purge our distinguished senator, Millard E. Tydings, became a boomerang in the last campaign," Lloyd said.

"That move on the part of the president has undoubtedly caused the independent people of Maryland to realize the importance in this election of electing men to office who are not personally ambitious to continue themselves in office for the balance of their lives, as Mr. Roosevelt obviously is seeking."

It was pointed out by the Eastern Shore delegate that he noticed in Southern Maryland "a large change of sentiment of all classes of people against the third term and against the continuance of the obvious failing of the New Deal administration."

Republican party workers, however, must not take too much for granted in the Willkie surge now evident throughout the state. The New Deal machine is a powerful affair and it will be aided by the use of federal funds in work jobs. Thus, there are heavy obstacles to overcome.

One thing that would aid very much in clinching Maryland for Willkie would be his personal appearance in the state, as suggested by former Governor Harry W. Nice, who is urging the national Republican organization to arrange for visits here by the nominee. Willkie's powerful personality, his convincing sincerity and his appealing forthright attitude on public affairs would be a powerful influence in swinging the state to him, and it is to be hoped that the national party leaders will arrange to bring him to the Free state. Maryland's electoral vote may be of decisive importance in this election, as Mr. Nice has stated.

How Much Does a Squirrel Weigh?

HOW MUCH does a squirrel weigh? Enlightenment thereon is contained in a bulletin of the West Virginia State Conservation Commission, which quotes figures indicating that the animal may weigh anywhere between eight ounces and a pound and a half. The gray squirrels killed by hunters in that state, however, average about a pound each.

Of 223 squirrels killed in Seneca State Forest last hunting season the heaviest weighed twenty-three ounces and the lightest, a female, weighed eight ounces. No male weighed less than eleven ounces. Nearly half of the male squirrels weighed between nineteen and twenty-one ounces and one out of five weighed twenty-three ounces. Of eighty-eight females, forty-five weighed between fourteen and seventeen ounces. These studies showed that adult male squirrels usually weigh nineteen ounces or more. Those under nineteen ounces generally are young squirrels.

Anyway, even if they are small, quirrel meat is a delicacy and it is a great pity there is such a scarcity of it, and that it is pretty costly. In order to obtain it, one must become a hunter, and pay license fees, and equip himself accordingly. Why the squirrel couldn't be domesticated and raised in quantity for sale as a table meat seems queer in a country where everything seems to be accomplished to gratify the taste. The reason probably is that the meat of the animal would be quite different unless it had the run of the woods, although that, too, could easily be provided.

Vitamins Finally Get Into Our Driving

FOOD as a preventive of night traffic accidents is not as fantastic as it sounds, according to an article by William Ullman, noted writer on automotive topics, in the current issue of Keystone Motorist.

Declaring that recent investigations by scientists in the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, have proved that insufficient vitamin A in food renders one subject to night blindness or inability to see in dim light, Ullman says the bureau is rounding out its studies to determine just how much of the vitamin the human body needs daily under normal conditions.

"While the full benefits of these studies," the article continues, "will apply to all, they are of particular importance in the crusade against death and injury on the highways. This is brought about by the fact that nearly sixty per cent of traffic fatalities occur at night, when only about one-third of the driving is done.

"Results already flowing from the investigation indicate that drivers and pedestrians who habitually live on a low vitamin A diet do not readily regain normal vision after staring into the bright lights of approaching automobiles. Moreover, low vitamin A diets not only cause night blindness but also narrow the field of vision. Even in daylight drivers on such diets do not have the proper side range of vision to prevent them from cutting into cars running by their side or to enable them to see cross traffic approaching when near intersections. And at night, they are less likely to see pedestrians walking along the side of the road."

While the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, is of the opinion that persons who have difficulty with night driving should obtain competent professional advice relating to proper diet, it quotes the federal investigators as saying common sources of vitamin A are yellow and leafy green vegetables, egg yolks, whole milk, and orange and tomato juice.

There may be just as much misery this year. There are—sickening thought—several hundred persons well and strong today who may be dead by Tuesday despite all the sermons on highway safety ever written.

I just haven't the lightness to make me a social asset at large parties, yet I can manage things. I enjoy people en masse, yet am fond of very few. I believe I have certain rights to happiness by virtue of my brains, body and breeding, but I also believe in the responsibilities these rights entail.

"I'm too stubborn, sensitive and old-fashioned in spots. I have a touch of the Scotch mystic, the Irish dreamer, and the New England business man. Aside from that, I need ten hours' sleep a day. I have a reasonably good record as a business woman, and a sad tendency to put off things until the last minute—then somehow get them done. I'm not half as smart as some people think I am, but because I have a gift for people, I can get away with it.

"I ask only a full, productive and interesting life. I will always give combative loyalty when loyalty is given me, within the code of ethics. If I can pass a code of ethics, plus loyalty, on to our youngster she will go a long way."

And I think that in these sentences I read honesty, self-knowledge and scrupulous determination to be fair. Also that I see in this letter the beginning of a new life for a man and a woman who have opened their hearts fearlessly to each other and henceforth will not be divided.

I wish I knew this couple.

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

NEW YORK CITY — The delay about getting the armament program going and this dangerous talk about industrialists charging back on accepting contracts because they want exhorbitant profits is almost wholly due to bad planning of the effort in the beginning and bad organization and direction of it now.

This business of contracting to make an absolutely new unit—like a tank—is a fearful and intricate thing. Laying out a production plan for a standard type of automobile, for example, is duck soup in comparison.

In the latter case you can figure very closely on the cost of those parts of the final assembly that you will not make yourself but buy from perhaps as many as 200 suppliers. You can figure that because those parts are near enough to standard for the manufacturer of them to know and tell you to the fraction of a cent the price you must figure in your cost.

You know your own production and assembly costs from experience. Your own profit, you will figure largely on your estimates of production—which is the only real gamble because it depends on sales. It sometimes costs half as much per unit to make 200,000 of a complicated product as it would cost to make one unit in a 10,000 schedule and perhaps ten times as much per unit to make only 1,000. That is the vast saving and economy of mass production of standardized units.

Much of this war production misses that whole pattern entirely. The designs are new and highly specialized. While the quantities seem huge—like 50,000 airplanes—they are chicken feed compared to a year's production in a single factory of, say, automobiles.

New Approach Needed

Furthermore, "50,000 airplanes" is a very misleading term. It includes everything from cheap light training planes to giant bombers—items so different that it is like saying "50,000 vehicles" when you mean everything from a streamlined train to a little kiddie-car and a wheelbarrow. Such a program is a bewildering complex of vastly varying units in relatively small production runs for each type. Old commercial standards are no good. This problem needs a completely new approach.

In such a mass every manufacturer is up against it—and so are the twenty to two hundred suppliers and sub-contractors. It is almost impossible to figure costs or accurately to set a price and know whether the small percentage included for profit will turn out to be exhorbitant or bring a staggering or even fatal loss.

The much publicized case of subcontractors who stopped a willing prime contractor on costs because they could get British business without any American labor or profit limitations is another instance of poor organization and direction of the whole armament effort.

Urges One Man Authority

The World war experience clearly proved that what this situation needs is some one man in authority over the whole production effort and an organization of industry itself in the various trade groups. It also requires all foreign buying to strain through the same control. Then, when a production problem comes up, all the purchasers of that type (foreign and domestic) and all the sellers or manufacturers (contractors and sub-contractors) can be seated around the same table, all conflicts composed and all difficulties ironed out.

Prices offered by other powers can be put in step with ours and deliveries arranged with the least interference. There is no guess or theory about that and it is not so difficult as it sounds. It was all successfully done in 1918.

The objection has been "too much authority in one executive." It isn't half the authority that the president wants to put in the man he laughingly calls "Jesse James—I mean Jones" by making him Pooh-Bah of Commerce and all the lending activities of government.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Island of Trinidad Is Seen As Most Desirable for Panama Canal Defense

Central Perss Columnist

Trinidad, one of Britain's Carribbean islands that Uncle Sam may get title to, or a ninety-nine-year lease of, is spoken of by American strategists as the most desirable of all available footholds in our southeastern seas for the Panama canal's defense against raiders from across the Atlantic.

Bermuda, also suggested as an island we perhaps shall gain possession of, is pretty good, too, but its geography isn't quite as favorable as Trinidad's.

And possibly we'll get Newfoundland likewise. Naturally, though, Newfoundland won't be worth a hoot so far as the Panama canal's concerned, however valuable it may be for our New England coast's protection.

Trinidad is just off Venezuela's waterfront, right at the mouth of the Orinoco. Not only is it a handy spot from which to keep an eye on Panama; it's a convenient place for us to operate from in the interests of the Brazilian coast's defense, as far southward as the point where Brazil takes its maximum bulge out into the Atlantic. It's there that some observers think the Nazis probably will try to effect a landing if they ever do attempt to establish themselves in the western hemisphere.

Port of Spain

Port of Spain is Trinidad's metropolis. It boasts a beautiful harbor—beautiful to look at and beautiful from a shipping standpoint. It's large and deep and, at its entrance, it shrinks into a pretty narrow channel, known as the Dragon's Jaws, which it would be the easiest thing in the world to fortify impregnably.

That harbor should be elegant for naval purposes.

The island's interior is mostly volcanically mountainous—smallish mountains but exceedingly steep ones. Fortunately they're extinct, in their volcanic capacity, so there are no eruptions to worry about.

But, mixed in among the mountains, are several perfectly flat areas, precisely adapted to utilization as aviation fields.

Oh, it's a dandy island for military adaption.

And asphalt abounds in the backcountry—big lakes of it. The stuff should be a commercial asset to us, if we acquire the place.

At a guess, I'd say that about eighty-five per cent of Trinidad's population is negro.

A Negro Doctor

When I put into Port of Spain a good many years ago, on my way home from Buenos Aires, my little daughter was suffering from quite a severe hurt, due to an accident on shipboard. Needing a physician, I asked the port authorities to recommend one. "By all means," they said unitedly, "see Dr. Laurence. He's far the best medico in Trinidad." I consulted him.

He was as black as the ace of spades. It somewhat flabbergasted me. He did a dandy job, though. I visited a drug store. Coons manned it exclusively. A colored reporter interviewed me. Then I went into a tap room. The bartender was white, but a group of African customers, recognizing me as a stranger, chummed up with me hospitably.

Here in the U. S. A. that kind of thing doesn't go, but you soon get used to it in Trinidad. You do in northern Brazil, too. In southern Brazil and farther to the southward there are racial distinctions, but there aren't any as far down the coast as Rio de Janiero or thereabouts.

Not So Bad, Either

The commingling isn't as objectionable as one might imagine, either.

Here at home most of us wouldn't care to be seen associating socially with another race; I might like 'em, but it would make me conspicuous.

But in Port of Spain or Para or Rio nobody would think a darned thing about it. It simply would be taken for granted; all over the place everybody's been doing it.

It makes a difference with the negroes also.

In the U. S. A. a negro has an inferiority complex. Either he's respectful, or, if not, he tends to be "sassy," to show that he's as good as anybody.

Down in Trinidad or Brazil he assumes that his equality with other folks is recognized and doesn't consider that he has to put on any particular airs to demonstrate it. If you don't want to mix with him, he doesn't care shucks, but goes his own way, same as two white men do to one another if they haven't anything in common.

English is the language at Port of Spain—the English kind, not the American version of it.

Trinidad never has been a tourist resort, like Bermuda, but doubtless it can be developed into one. It's a lovely place, with a lovely climate. The natives equally are in favor of English and American money—all they can get of either.

Marietta Paper Out for Willkie

Editor, a Lifelong Democrat, Holds New Deal Is Not Democratic

"Why Democrats Quit Roosevelt" is the heading of an editorial in the Marietta, O., Times, in which the editor, Frank McKinney, a lifelong Jeffersonian Democrat, takes his leave of the third-term New Deal party and announces that he will support Wendell Willkie for president.

"Giving reasons for adding his name to the growing list of Democrats who have declared that they cannot support President Roosevelt for a third term," it says, in parts, "former Governor George White might have been speaking for thousands of less prominent members of his party as well as for himself. * * * He has finally concluded, as many thoughtful persons have done, that irreparable damage to the nation and its institution might result from the continuation of this administration. * * *

"None of the Democratic leaders who announce their opposition to President Roosevelt feel that they are leaving their party. Instead they are trying to save the party, to preserve its principles and its traditions, to which they have been faithful. They are not bolting the Democratic party, but they are trying to save the party from Roosevelt and the New Deal, who long ago definitely deserted the party. Roosevelt and the New Deal have not been truly Democratic for eight years.

"There is only one way in which they can bring about the change they believe is imperative. It is to vote for Wendell Willkie and ask their friends and supporters to do the same."

Travel in West Virginia

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

In West Virginia you can see America at her best. This beautiful state stands almost on the threshold of the world's busiest market places, having a diversity of scenery and of natural recreational facilities, uncrowded and unspoiled; where one can "look into the hills whence cometh my strength;" to mountains covered with forests where tumbling rivers and mountain streams lead you to natural wonders, and observe amid these pleasures the opportunities for new industry, enterprise and investment, says a bulletin issued by the state road department.

The Indians and the early settlers of the Tidewater and Piedmont, Virginia, looked first upon the scenic wonders and health giving waters in the hills of West Virginia. Later, pioneers migrating westward, blazed trails that in years to come became roads and are today smooth paved highways. Midsummer is a lovely time to travel in West Virginia, when the heavy foliage of the forest trees cast cool shadows and the crystal mountain streams invite you to enjoy a swim; when the golden ripe fields of grain are at their best and the twilights are long and peaceful. A tour of West Virginia reveals a state of rich serenity, of peace and character and history and beauty.

Broomsticks and Lead Pipe

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

The only purpose of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, or so its proponents would have us believe, is to increase materially the size of the army in the interest of national defense. The opponents of the bill also desire to increase the size of the army but believe that this can be done without conscription, in an American way.

Sucha way is the proposal of Senator Taft for a volunteer corps of 1,500,000 men, trained for one year at army pay of $30 a month. Senator Taft believes that such a plan would assure the United States of an adequate army. Immediately the answer flies back from the conscription devotees that "it won't work." The only reason given is that volunteers have been tried and are not forthcoming. But they have been forthcoming at the rate of 400,000 a year and enlisting for a three-year period. The Burke-Wadsworth bill does not propose to draft more than 800,000 men in the next twelve months.

Meantime the regular army, now conducting maneuvers, is supplying its men with broomsticks and lead pipe for rifles and artillery, and substituting trucks for tanks, because it does not have the equipment needed. Instead of adding 400,000 more broomstick-wielders this year, as the conscriptionists would have it, why not try the voluntary enlistment system first, with certain changes, and see if it will work, before damning it outright as a failure without trial?

Mannish Garb For the Girls Is Again the Vogue

Edwin C. Hill

It was in the summer of 1919 that college girls suddenly went in for mannish styles. They started bobbing their hair and wearing clothes of a straight-line cut and stories of their hoydenish doings came from the campus and the parties.

Some old sobersides, the president of a tank college somewhere, saw in all this a backwash of the war and began the girls to get back to their frills and flipperies. Dominies and other pious folk here and there and everywhere took to scolding the girls without any noticeable effect, of course. They kept on with their style poaching until they got an other whim and went back to the cutie styles.

Here they go again. News stories are that sweaters, socks and shirts are hot numbers in the smart shops which, nominally at least, handle feminine apparel. The more unmistakably mannish the garment the bolder the garm, as the girls step up for the fall semester.

Favorite Items

Favorite items are brogan shoes, tailored flannel shirts that button at the wrists, turkey red wraps around jumpers, red and yellow socks and "beanie" head-pieces. They demand plenty of pockets. We will note the passing of the handbag if this keeps up.

Interesting, in contrast to 1919, is the fact that nobody scolds the girls this time. The elders of our time along with those who wanted to change the course of the Gulf Stream, seem ready to let nature takes its course. That seems to be a good idea, so far as women are concerned.

The late Lucy Page Gaston of Chicago, who put in a long life desperately fighting cigarette smoking, found that out. There is no evidence that years of public outcry against women smoking had the slightest effect. Men, more than women, perhaps, know when they are licked.

Mr. Beebe Heartbroken

Currently, the only pained cry of distress about style trends is the heart-broken wail of Mr. Lucius Beebe, but it is men rather than women who wound him so deeply. Mr. Beebe is shaken right down to the instep by men going around town in slacks. His phillipic against slacks might, in vehemence and impassioned eloquence, take its place along with Cicero's oration against Catalina. He also is shattered by the prevalence of hatless men, but that menace, he thinks, is passing.

Unhappily, it would seem that the world has been too preoccupied with war, famine, pestilence, all the plagues of the litany in fact, to be aware of this new peril until Mr. Beebe bared the evil which stalks in our city streets.

Offense Against Decorum

We didn't quite follow Mr. Beebe as to the basic moral turpitude of wearing slacks, but the main idea seems to be that such garments constitute an offense against decorum which ought to bring swift and summary punishment. Mr. Beebe thanks the high gods that "neither the financial district nor Park Avenue has yet encountered this gratuitous vulgarity." Since the days of Ward McAllister and Sergeant Cram, it hasn't been so easy to keep the compass of decorum as it was then.

Mr. Beebe, while still a young man, has heavy responsibilities in this field, and no doubt longs for the good old days when every thing was under control. I can remember when there was quite a blast in the newspapers because some chap took off his coat in a hot day in a good restaurant. That ended that. The pharisees "made broad the hem of their garments," and advertised their piety by their phylacteries.

Not a Social Mark

This decorum was in no way revealing as to their social worth. No more revealing were the elaborate wardrobes of Berry Wall and Diamond Jim Brady, back in the days of decorum—which, incidentally, were days of a much more "gratuitous vulgarity," then this way of slack suits. Then and as now there was plenty of dressed up vulgarity.

We hope Mr. Beebe don't challenge us to a duel, but we've been rather pleased about the way men are at least getting a dash of color and variety into their clothes, even if it is a bit too informal to suit the boulevardiers.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Conservation of Eyesight in Industry Noted

Progress in Last Quarter of Century Has Been Rapid

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

If let alone by the power politicians and war-mongers, the world would move foward. One little field in which improvement has been so rapid as to have entirely changed the picture in a quarter of a century was called to my attention by a worker who has devoted his life to its development. That is the field of eye conservation in industrial occupations.

He cites the improvements as follows:

First in importance, he says, there are far fewer amateur shop specialists—the kind who use toothpicks, matches, pocket-knives, files, screwdrivers, dirty handkerchiefs and other infection-bearing devices to remove particles from the eyes of injured fellow-workers. First-aid rooms with doctors or nurses in charge have become the rule rather than the exception during the past quarter-century, and the workers have learned the danger of neglecting infection in even the most trivial eye injury.

Improvements Noted

The installation of exhaust systems to draw off poisonous gases and dusts which are injurious to the eyes, ventilation and air-conditioning are also notable improvements.

Industrial lighting has become an expert field of applied science. This has contributed to sight conservation and to the general health of the worker by preventing conditions that result from eye strain. A study was made of the employees of two New York City post offices—one modern and well illuminated, the other old and with inadequate lighting. The contrasts were often so striking as to strain credulity. In the well-lighted office twelve per cent of the employees were found to have inflammatory or refractive conditions of the eyes or eyelids; twenty-one per cent in the poorly-lighted office. In the well-lighted office twenty-two per cent had ocular muscle unbalance, in the ill-lighted office thirty-three per cent.

Eye Fatigue is Wearing

Three times as many employees in the poorly-lighted post office suffered from asthenopia—a weakness or rapid fatigue of the eyes often accompanied by headache—as in the well-illuminated post office. What was true in these two offices is undoubtedly applicable to all industry. Frank Gilbreth, one of the earliest students of fatigue in industry, said, "No fatigue is more wearing than eye fatigue."

Eye infections are greatly reduced by having sanitary wash? rooms. The roller towel has long also been legislated out of existence. The common towel is even a greater carrier of eye infection than the common goggles.

There are many remaining problems in eye conservation in industry — the most pressing being the hazard of the growing use of poisonous chemicals. But, as I said above, the whole picture is changed from the callous indifference that was displayed by employers to these conditions a scant quarter-century ago.

Questions and Answers

J. L.—"I have had pompholyx for three summers and would like to know what causes it and what is a cure for it."

Answer—Pompholyx is described as itchy blisters. It is an old name. The condition is probably ringworm. Treatment is by Whitfield's Ointment.

J. L.—"What causes water brash and what remedy could I use?"

Answer—Water brash is the regurgitation of acid contents of the stomach into the mouth. It is due to increased acidity of the gastric juices. The remedy is an alkali such as baking soda.

M. R.—"Do sedatives cause one to have hallucinations? I mean barbital and other medicines taken in capsules for mental nervousness. Do you recommend this?"

Answer—Barbital is very likely to cause hallucinations in middle-aged people. I would certainly not recommend this unless it is ordered by a doctor.

THE DAILY STORY

REBELLION

By MARY DRAKE

"Breakfast is served, dear!" Anita's voice came from the white-tiled kitchen as it always did, with what seemed to Clem a sepulchural tone because of the tile. Like singing in a bathroom. Clem hurried a little with his shaving and nicked his chin, That, too, was about usual.

"I'll be there in a moment, pet!" he called as he wiped his chin with one of Anita's guest towels.

It Was Fun Telling the Boys at the Office About It.

For 30 years of their married life now Anita had gone to endless bother keeping tiny guest towels hung in the bathroom which no one ever used. It gave him a peculiar thrill to use it.

"Eat your bacon and eggs before they get cold, dear!" his wife admonished as he came into the kitchen, still coatless. Bacon and eggs! Thirty years of bacon and eggs every morning at two eggs per morning times 365 times a year times 30 years was a staggering total.

"I'm not very hungry this morning, dear," he said suddenly.

He wasn't, either, after having spent almost all night tossing sleeplessly and thinking about things. He had been getting into a gradual rut and hadn't even known it. At least, not until he had approached the boss for a promotion which he had richly deserved after 35 years as cashier at the factory.

Did he get it? he reviewed for the thousandth time in his mind. He did not! The boss had said in a nice way that he was much too valuable to the firm as cashier to be promoted. A slight pay increase would be given him instead. And he was still in the rut.

"Why, Clem dear, you're not ill, are you?" Anita asked him in the maternal manner he had become used to. "Let me look at your tongue. Maybe you'd better call the office and say you won't be at work today." He had heard those identical lines countless times before, every time he had had even a touch of a cold since he and Anita had been married.

Something red and exhiliarating ballooned up within Clem's chest and gave him a giddy feeling, like the beer he had had once at the Elks' picnic when Anita had not been watching too closely. Very calmly he folded his napkin from force of habit and stuck it back into the napkin ring with the engraved C on it. Then he rose and with a magnificent gesture of revolt precisely dumped the plate of bacon and eggs upside down on the oil-clothed kicthen table.

"Nuts!" he said quite distinctly as he stalked regally out of the house, not even bothering to put on his coat, just carrying it over his arm and jamming on his comfortable old gray fedora. He turned the corner at O'Brien's drugstore and suddenly bent down to rub his aching toes. A half housebrick lay on the sidewalk. Lifting it without really thinking, he threw it straight at the plate glass window before him. The crashing glass soothed his soul strangely.

And then he saw his old friend, Patrolman Finnegan, standing there!

"Clem Jones!" the magistrate's clerk bawled out the next morning as Clem, along with a dozen other miscreants, stood before the elevated bench of the Magistrate's Court like a trusted sheep dog who had been caught killing his charges. It was all so unreal! "Charge of malicious mischief, arresting officer, Finnegan!" the clerk added impersonally for the judge's benefit.

"Here, your honor!" Clem answered, the easy assurance with which he reeled off the words he had heretofore heard only in movies giving him a peculiar satisfaction. It seemed years since he had been home, after spending a whole day and night behind bars in what he now referred to in his mind as the bull pen. He stepped forward, his face dirty and black with unshorn beard, the taste of unsugared and uncreamed jailhouse oatmeal still on his tongue. He looked like a bum!

"It was only suspicion, your honor," kindly old Pete Finnegan stepped forward in Clem's defense. "I've walked beat past Mr. Jones' house for the last 25 years and never knew him to be anything but an honest, law-abiding citizen."

The magistrate looked at the report in his hand. "Then how about the brick which broke O'Brien's drugstore window? I suppose that a fairy threw it!" he observed. "The charge says that the defendant was found in front of the window a few seconds after the window was broken and O'Brien came running out to investigate."

Officer Finnegan looked somberly at his old friend. "It couldn't have been him, because I saw him running for the 8:10 train he has to catch every morning!" he told the frowning judge. "I know he was late, because he came out of the house without even having time to put on his coat—just his hat!"

"How about it, Jones?" the magistrate demanded, bending a look upon Clem which defied any attempt at untruth. Clem straightened his bent shoulders feeling like a man of the world, an experienced pleader before the bar. "Is Officer Finnegan's surmise correct?"

"Well, I was on my way to the office, that's true," Clem began, not exactly lying, but preparing to.

"Dismissed for lack of evidence. Next case!" the magistrate snapped, waving Clem away from the bench. Clem went out of the court with a more elastic step than he had had for years. He shook hands with Finnegan, paid him for the broken window and went down to the office. It was fun telling the boys at the office about it, and if the story was decorated a bit it was only because they seemed to expect it.

Clem got through his shaving without accident the following morning, feeling like a million dollars cash money, right on the line. He anticipated Anita's routine call, and appeared at the table with his coat, which he hung in its usual place on the back of the chair.

"Eat your bacon and eggs before they get cold, dear!" his wife admonished. His ears absorbed the formula warning with a new complacense. He picked up his fork with a smile.

"Yes, pet!" he agreed mildly. The bacon and eggs tasted good!—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Conservation of Eyesight in Industry Noted

Progress in Last Quarter of Century Has Been Rapid

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

If let alone by the power politi- ans and war-mongers, the world uld move foward. One little field which improvement has been so pid as to have entirely changed e picture in a quarter of a cen- y was called to my attention by worker who has devoted his life its development. That is the ld of eye conservation in indus- al occupations.

He cites the improvements as llows:

First in importance, he says, ere are far fewer amateur shop ists—the kind who use tooth- cks, matches, pocket-knives, files, rewdrivers, dirty handkerchiefs d other infection-bearing devices remove particles from the eyes injured fellow-workers. First- d rooms with doctors or nurses charge have become the rule ther than the exception during e past quarter-century, and the rkers have learned the danger of fecting infection in even the most vial eye injury.

Improvements Noted

The installation of exhaust sys- ms to draw off poisonous gases d dusts which are injurious to e eyes, ventilation and air-con- ioning are also notable improve- ents.

Industrial lighting has become expert field of applied science. is has contributed to sight con- vation and to the general health the worker by preventing con- ions that result from eye strain. A study was made of the em- oyees of two New York City post ffices—one modern and well illu- inated, the other old and with in- dequate lighting. The contrasts re often so striking as to strain credulity. In the well-lighted office welve per cent of the employees re found to have inflammatory or rritative conditions of the eyes or elids; twenty-one per cent in the oorly-lighted office. In the well- ted office twenty-two per cent d ocular muscle unbalance, in e ill-lighted office thirty-three r cent.

Eye Fatigue is Wearing

Three times as many employees the poorly-lighted post office ffered from asthenopia—a weak- ss or rapid fatigue of the eyes ten accompanied by headache— in the well-illuminated post of- e. What was true in these two ffices is undoubtedly applicable to l industry. Frank Gilbreth, one the earliest students of fatigue industry, said, "No fatigue is ore wearing than eye fatigue."

Eye infections are greatly re- uced by having sanitary wash? oms. The roller towel has long been legislated out of exist- nce. The common towel is even a reater carrier of eye infection than common goggles.

There are many remaining prob- ms in eye conservation in indus- — the most pressing being the zard of the growing use of poi- nous chemicals. But, as I said ove, the whole picture is changed om the callous indifference that as displayed by employers to these nditions a scant quarter-century go.

Questions and Answers

J. L.—"I have had pompholyx for ree summers and would like to ow what causes it and what is cure for it."

Answer—Pompholyx is described itchy blisters. It is an old name. he condition is probably ringworm. reatment is by Whitfield's Oint- ent.

J. L.—"What causes water brash d what remedy could I use?"

Answer—Water brash is the re- rgitation of acid contents of the mach into the mouth. It is due increased acidity of the gastric ices. The remedy is an alkali such baking soda.

M. R.—"Do sedatives cause one have hallucinations? I mean bar- ital and other medicines taken in psules for mental nervousness. o you recommend this?"

Answer—Barbital is very likely cause hallucinations in middle- ed people. I would certainly not ommend this unless it is ordered a doctor.

THE DAILY STORY

REBELLION

By MARY DRAKE

"Breakfast is served, dear!" Anita's voice came from the white-tiled kitchen as it always did, with what seemed to Clem a sepulchural tone because of the tile. Like singing in a bathroom. Clem hurried a little with his shaving and nicked his chin. That, too, was about usual.

"I'll be there in a moment, pet!" he called as he wiped his chin with one of Anita's guest towels.

It Was Fun Telling the Boys at the Office About It.

For 30 years of their married life now Anita had gone to endless bother keeping tiny guest towels hung in the bathroom which no one ever used. It gave him a peculiar thrill to use it.

"Eat your bacon and eggs before they get cold, dear!" his wife admonished as he came into the kitchen, still coatless. Bacon and eggs! Thirty years of bacon and eggs every morning at two eggs per morning times 365 times a year times 30 years was a staggering total.

"I'm not very hungry this morning, dear," he said suddenly.

He wasn't, either, after having spent almost all night tossing sleeplessly and thinking about things. He had been getting into a gradual rut and hadn't even known it. At least, not until he had approached the boss for a promotion which he had richly deserved after 35 years as cashier at the factory.

Did he get it? he reviewed for the thousandth time in his mind. He did not! The boss had said in a nice way that he was much too valuable to the firm as cashier to be promoted. A slight pay increase would be given him instead. And he was still in the rut.

"Why, Clem dear, you're not ill, are you?" Anita asked him in the maternal manner he had become used to. "Let me look at your tongue. Maybe you'd better call the office and say you won't be at work today." He had heard those identical lines countless times before, every time he had had even a touch of a cold since he and Anita had been married.

Something red and exhiliarating ballooned up within Clem's chest and gave him a giddy feeling, like the beer he had had once at the Elks' picnic when Anita had not been watching too closely. Very calmly he folded his napkin from force of habit and stuck it back into the napkin ring with the engraved C on it. Then he rose and with a magnificent gesture of revolt precisely dumped the plate of bacon and eggs upside down on the oil-clothed kicthen table.

"Nuts!" he said quite distinctly as he stalked regally out of the house, not even bothering to put on his coat, just carrying it over his arm and jamming on his comfortable old gray fedora. He turned the corner at O'Brien's drugstore and suddenly bent down to rub his aching toes. A half housebrick lay on the sidewalk. Lifting it without really thinking, he threw it straight at the plate glass window before him. The crashing glass soothed his soul strangely.

And then he saw his old friend, Patrolman Finnegan, standing there!

"Clem Jones!" the magistrate's clerk bawled out the next morning as Clem, along with a dozen other miscreants, stood before the elevated bench of the Magistrate's Court like a trusted sheep dog who had been caught killing his charges. It was all so unreal! "Charge of malicious mischief, arresting officer, Finnegan!" the clerk added impersonally for the judge's benefit.

"Here, your honor!" Clem answered, the easy assurance with which he reeled off the words he had heretofore heard only in movies giving him a peculiar satisfaction. It seemed years since he had been home, after spending a whole day and night behind bars in what he now referred to in his mind as the bull pen. He stepped forward, his face dirty and black with unshorn beard, the taste of unsugared and uncreamed jailhouse oatmeal still on his tongue. He looked like a bum!

"It was only suspicion, your honor," kindly old Pete Finnegan stepped forward in Clem's defense. "I've walked beat past Mr. Jones' house for the last 25 years and never knew him to be anything but an honest, law-abiding citizen."

The magistrate looked at the report in his hand. "Then how about the brick which broke O'Brien's drugstore window? I suppose that a fairy threw it!" he observed. "The charge says that the defendant was found in front of the window a few seconds after the window was broken and O'Brien came running out to investigate."

Officer Finnegan looked somberly at his old friend. "It couldn't have been him, because I saw him running for the 8:10 train he has to catch every morning!" he told the frowning judge. "I know he was late, because he came out of the house without even having time to put on his coat—just his hat!"

"How about it, Jones?" the magistrate demanded, bending a look upon Clem which defied any attempt at untruth. Clem straightened his bent shoulders feeling like a man of the world, an experienced pleader before the bar. "Is Officer Finnegan's surmise correct?"

"Well, I was on my way to the office, that's true," Clem began, not exactly lying, but preparing to.

"Dismissed for lack of evidence. Next case!" the magistrate snapped, waving Clem away from the bench. Clem went out of the court with a more elastic step than he had had for years. He shook hands with Finnegan, paid him for the broken window and went down to the office. It was fun telling the boys at the office about it, and if the story was decorated a bit it was only because they seemed to expect it.

Clem got through his shaving without accident the following morning, feeling like a million dollars cash money, right on the line. He anticipated Anita's routine call, and appeared at the table with his coat, which he hung in its usual place on the back of the chair.

"Eat your bacon and eggs before they get cold, dear!" his wife admonished. His ears absorbed the formula warning with a new complacense. He picked up his fork with a smile.

"Yes, pet!" he agreed mildly. The bacon and eggs tasted good!—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

ponderance of training planes was obvious, the secretary added that the navy and the army were engaged in preparing men to operate the total force of 25,000 planes planned by 1942.

The plane contracts announced by the War Department today were as follows:

Beech Aircraft Corporation, Wichita, Kas., 150 training planes and twenty transport planes with spare parts, $4,847,217.

lation as "illusory" and asserted that Germany could not grant such assurances. Dr. Wilhelm Tannenberg, first secretary at the embassy, said, however, that this did not constitute an advance answer.

The Marshall Field Committee in New York, one of the principal organizations with which the State Department has been discussing the refugee question, was said to have no immediate plan for sending ships because of the uncertainty of Germany's attitude and the intensified scale of hostilities around the British Isles.

The new act does not limit its application to British children but that was its main purpose. It provides that the children must be under sixteen years of age.

The author of the measure, Rep. Hennings (D-Mo), estimated 200,000 British children would be brought here if there were ships to carry them.

space. The Rumanians said antiaircrft fire brought down the Hungrian plane and that no damage was done since the airport had been evacuated.

Peace Sought in Balkans

The authoritative Nazi commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, described the conference at Vienna, to which Rumania and Hungary were summoned urgently by Germany and Italy, as a meeting in which the Axis diplomats will exercise their "united weight" to bring the Balkan neighbors together. The German and Italian foreign ministers talked with Hitler at his Bavarian chalet before leaving for Vienna.

Germany is vitally interested in a quick settlement for two reasons: to maintain an uninterrupted flow of oil and food supplies for the battle of Britain and to permit Germany to concentrate on Britain without having to send troops to a backdoor conflict.

The British again reported flung air raids on Italy, Germany and German-occupied territory. The Fiat airplane works at Turin was attacked, the British declared.

Italian airmen were active, bombing vital Port Said, at the northern entrance to the Suez Canal, and British oil bases on the Mediterranean at Hafia, Palestine.

fuel and food and that the navy had come to rescue us."

Passengers Were Calm

He said the broadcasts amused Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who, with her three children, were passengers.

"None of us got excited," the captain added, "we have 10,000 pounds of food in the ice boxes now and fuel enough to carry us to Petsamo and back again."

Because the course ordered by the United State Department took the ship through areas reputedly mined by Germany in her attempt to blockade Britain, there were two lifeboat drills a day. A double lookout was on duty twenty-four hours a day and Capt. Torning himself stayed round-the-clock on the bridge until two days ago.

The voyage was considered more perilous because Germany disclaimed responsibility for her safety on the course taken. The State Department, however, refused to change her route, contending the belligerents had been advised of her course and had assured her safe conduct.

Princess To See Roosevelt

The Norwegian royal family was taken off the American Legion by coast guard cutter down the bay—destroyers had convoyed the ship the last 500 miles — and greeted by a handfull of persons at the battery.

The crown princess said she had no idea where she would live. Tomorrow, she will go to Hyde Park, N. Y., to visit President Roosevelt, who personally invited them to this country about four weeks ago.

She said she was convinced that Norway would be independent and free again.

Mrs. Florence Jaffray Harriman, United States Minister to Norway who also was a passenger, praised the conduct of the American Legion's officers and crew.

Measure

army's chief of staff, recently said that number was a minimum necessary for defending the Western Hemisphere against invasion from abroad.

In calling up the conscripts, army officials say, plans are to exempt men with dependents, and the bill itself provides an out for conscientious objectors, although they may be required to devote a year to noncombatant work or to work of national importance under civil direction.

Among the amendments which the Senate added to the bill was one by Senator Adams (D-Colo) to extend present profit limitations on government contracts for ships and airplanes to contracts for weapons, ammunition and other military equipment.

The chamber adopted this amendment without a record vote, at a time when the National Defense Commission and the navy were trying to get Congress to suspend the special limitations on ship and plane profits by a provision attached to the pending excess profits tax bill.

Senators pointed out that the Senate amendment extending the special limitations would become inoperative if Congress granted the request of the commission and the navy.

Substitutes Defeated

Approaching the final vote, the Senate brushed aside proposed substitutions for the draft bill. One of the last disposed of was that by Senator Maloney (D-Conn) to delay conscription until Jan. 1 while voluntary enlistments were sought to fill the army's requirements. The vote was 50 to 35.

After the final action had been taken, Senator VanNuys (D-Ind) who voted against the bill, issued an explanatory statement, saying that while he strongly favored an adequate national defense he was "fundamentally opposed to compulsory military conscription in time of peace."

A statement by Senatr Guffy (D-Pa) who voted for the bill, said he would "never vote to send a single American soldier to fight on European soil," but would "continue to support every measure that strengthens our defense and thereby discourages all thought of aggression on the part of foreign forces."

The supporters of immediate conscription had an uncomfortably close call on an amendment by Senator Hayden (D-Ariz) to postpone the actual drafting of men for sixty days and give the voluntary enlistment system a further trial meanwhile. The final vote on this amendment was 41 vote for it to 43 against.

Soon afterward, the Senate turned down 26 to 58 an amendment by Senator Neely (D-WVa) calling for a 30-day postponement.

The industrial draft amendment approved previously touched off prolonged discussion.

George Criticizes Bill

And Senator George (D-Ga), in an address to which the Senate listened attentively, said it would be impossible to convince the people that the present administration was preparing for peace. Their reaction, he added, would be expressed in the coming presidential election.

"Conscript manpower, conscript planes, conscript the farmer, if you please," the Georgian boomed. "Conscript every industry, conscript the labor to run industry. Conscript the wealth of the country in peace-time and then watch how seriously the American people will say that you are standing for peace; watch the verdict, gentlemen, in November."

To newspaper correspondents, but not on the Senate floor, Senator Holt (D-WVa) said he had received information from a source he considered reliable that two pro-administration senators were conducting a canvass of the Senate to see if there was sufficient strength for a declaration that a state of war existed between the United States and Germany.

Holt refused to reveal either the source of his information or the identity of the Senators he said were involved.

With heavy irony, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) suggested to the Senate, meanwhile, that it "go the whole way" and attach "a declaration of war" to the conscript bill.

The amendment directed at contractors with whom the government has difficulty reaching agreements was presented jointly by Senator Russell (D-Ga) and Senator Overton (D-La), with a statement that it was intended to prevent a "sitdown strike" against limitations on profits which manufacturers may derive on the production of numerous defense items. It would confer upon the secretaries of war and of the navy broad authority to take over the plants of manufacturers with whom satisfactory agreements could not be reached, if the plants in question were deemed "necessary for the national defense."

Before the amendment was adopted, the supporters of conscription beat down, by a vote of 55 to 27, an amendment by Senator Wiley (R-Wis) which would have prevented conscription until Congress declared that an emergency existed. Essentially the proposal was similar to one by Senator Walsh (D-Mass), conditioning the draft upon the existence of a state of war or a congressional declaration that the United States was threatened with invasion.

One more important test remained before the bill could be passed, a vote on the substitute by Senator Maloney (D-Conn) to defer the draft until Jan. 1 and apply it then only if the voluntary enlistment system had proved incapable of producing men for the army in sufficient numbers. Numerous opponents of the bill were equally opposed to the Maloney idea.

Powerful support for the Russell-Overton amendment came from Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Committee, who had several times complained to the Senate that some sub-contractors were refusing naval orders because their profits on them were limited by law to eight per cent. Meanwhile, they were making eighteen per cent on foreign orders he said.

"A great flood of foreign orders has resulted in indifference by manufacturers on domestic orders," Walsh said.

"In my opinion, if the business had not been accelerated by foreign orders, every one of these plane manufacturers would have been glad to get these contracts at eight per cent profits."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Churchill Is Cause

Indo-China could not be confirmed here.

In accusing Churchill of attempting to detach French possessions from the motherland, today's communique recalled that on June 16 (when the French military collapse was becoming apparent) the British government "proposed to the French government a merger of France and Britain and their empires.

"The proposal also embraced continuation of hostilities; in brief, capitulation of the French army and transfer of the government abroad. It was rejected as not in keeping with the government's duties toward the country.

"It is apparent now that Churchill resumed the offensive, but limited his ambitions this time to correspond with his reduced means, and in the absence of anything better used a renegade ex-general for his purposes."

ponderance of training planes was obvious, the secretary added that the navy and the army were engaged in preparing men to operate the total force of 25,000 planes planned by 1942.

The plane contracts announced by the War Department today were as follows:

Beech Aircraft Corporation, Wichita, Kas., 150 training planes and twenty transport planes with spare parts, $4,847,217.

The Marshall Field Committee in New York, one of the principal organizations with which the State Department has been discussing the refugee question, was said to have no immediate plan for sending ships because of the uncertainty of Germany's attitude and the intensified scale of hostilities around the British Isles.

The new act does not limit its application to British children but that was its main purpose. It provides that the children must be under sixteen years of age.

The author of the measure, Rep. Hennings (D-Mo), estimated 200,000 British children would be brought here if there were ships to carry them.

Peace Sought in Balkans

The authoritative Nazi commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, described the conference at Vienna, to which Rumania and Hungary were summoned urgently by Germany and Italy, as a meeting in which the Axis diplomats will exercise their "united weight" to bring the Balkan neighbors together. The German and Italian foreign ministers talked with Hitler at his Bavarian chalet before leaving for Vienna.

Germany is vitally interested in a quick settlement for two reasons: to maintain an uninterrupted flow of oil and food supplies for the battle of Britain and to permit Germany to concentrate on Britain without having to send troops to a backdoor conflict.

The British again reported flung air raids on Italy, Germany and German-occupied territory. The Fiat airplane works at Turin was attacked, the British declared.

Italian airmen were active, bombing vital Port Said, at the northern entrance to the Suez Canal, and British oil bases on the Mediterranean at Hafia, Palestine.

fuel and food and that the navy had come to rescue us."

Passengers Were Calm

He said the broadcasts amused Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who, with her three children, were passengers.

"None of us got excited," the captain added, "we have 10,000 pounds of food in the ice boxes now and fuel enough to carry us to Petsamo and back again."

Because the course ordered by the United State Department took the ship through areas reputedly mined by Germany in her attempt to blockade Britain, there were two lifeboat drills a day. A double lookout was on duty twenty-four hours a day and Capt. Torning himself stayed round-the-clock on the bridge until two days ago.

The voyage was considered more perilous because Germany disclaimed responsibility for her safety on the course taken. The State Department, however, refused to change her route, contending the belligerents had been advised of her course and had assured her safe conduct.

Princess To See Roosevelt

The Norwegian royal family was taken off the American Legion by coast guard cutter down the bay—destroyers had convoyed the ship the last 500 miles — and greeted by a handfull of persons at the battery.

The crown princess said she had no idea where she would live. Tomorrow, she will go to Hyde Park, N. Y., to visit President Roosevelt, who personally invited them to this country about four weeks ago.

She said she was convinced that Norway would be independent and free again.

Mrs. Florence Jaffray Harriman, United States Minister to Norway who also was a passenger, praised the conduct of the American Legion's officers and crew.

army's chief of staff, recently said that number was a minimum necessary for defending the Western Hemisphere against invasion from abroad.

In calling up the conscripts, army officials say, plans are to exempt men with dependents, and the bill itself provides an out for conscientious objectors, although they may be required to devote a year to noncombatant work or to work of national importance under civil direction.

Among the amendments which the Senate added to the bill was one by Senator Adams (D-Colo) to extend present profit limitations on government contracts for ships and airplanes to contracts for weapons, ammunition and other military equipment.

The chamber adopted this amendment without a record vote, at a time when the National Defense Commission and the navy were trying to get Congress to suspend the special limitations on ship and plane profits by a provision attached to the pending excess profits tax bill.

Senators pointed out that the Senate amendment extending the special limitations would become inoperative if Congress granted the request of the commission and the navy.

Substitutes Defeated

Approaching the final vote, the Senate brushed aside proposed substitutions for the draft bill. One of the last disposed of was that by Senator Maloney (D-Conn) to delay conscription until Jan. 1 while voluntary enlistments were sought to fill the army's requirements. The vote was 50 to 35.

After the final action had been taken, Senator VanNuys (D-Ind) who voted against the bill, issued an explanatory statement, saying that while he strongly favored an adequate national defense he was "fundamentally opposed to compulsory military conscription in time of peace."

A statement by Senatr Guffy (D-Pa) who voted for the bill, said he would "never vote to send a single American soldier to fight on European soil," but would "continue to support every measure that strengthens our defense and thereby discourages all thought of aggression on the part of foreign forces."

The supporters of immediate conscription had an uncomfortably close call on an amendment by Senator Hayden (D-Ariz) to postpone the actual drafting of men for sixty days and give the voluntary enlistment system a further trial meanwhile. The final vote on this amendment was 41 vote for it to 43 against.

Soon afterward, the Senate turned down 26 to 58 an amendment by Senator Neely (D-WVa) calling for a 30-day postponement.

The industrial draft amendment approved previously touched off prolonged discussion.

George Criticizes Bill

And Senator George (D-Ga), in an address to which the Senate listened attentively, said it would be impossible to convince the people that the present administration was preparing for peace. Their reaction, he added, would be expressed in the coming presidential election.

"Conscript manpower, conscript planes, conscript the farmer, if you please," the Georgian boomed. "Conscript every industry, conscript the labor to run industry. Conscript the wealth of the country in peace-time and then watch how seriously the American people will say that you are standing for peace; watch the verdict, gentlemen, in November."

To newspaper correspondents, but not on the Senate floor, Senator Holt (D-WVa) said he had received information from a source he considered reliable that two pro-administration senators were conducting a canvass of the Senate to see if there was sufficient strength for a declaration that a state of war existed between the United States and Germany.

Holt refused to reveal either the source of his information or the identity of the Senators he said were involved.

With heavy irony, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) suggested to the Senate, meanwhile, that it "go the whole way" and attach "a declaration of war" to the conscript bill.

The amendment directed at contractors with whom the government has difficulty reaching agreements was presented jointly by Senator Russell (D-Ga) and Senator Overton (D-La), with a statement that it was intended to prevent a "sitdown strike" against limitations on profits which manufacturers may derive on the production of numerous defense items. Dizzy Dean Is Recalled by Chicago Cubs

Former Star Major League Pitcher Will Be Given Final Chance

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (AP)—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, once one of the greatest righthanded pitchers in baseball, is coming back to the Chicago Cubs.

Recall of the lanky hurler from Tulsa of the Texas League was announced today by the Cub Manager, Gabby Hartnett, who said he hoped to have Dean ready for duty in the Cincinnati series opening here Sept. 7.

The eccentric, colorful moundsman, who won thirty games to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a pennant in 1934, has been with Tulsa since early in June. He'd asked to be sent there so he could experiment with a new side arm delivery after he had started five times for the Cubs and completed only one game.

Dean, who cost the Cubs $185,000 in cash and three players in 1938, now faces his great chance to recapture at least a part of the hurling glory that once was his. This will be his final chance with the Cubs, according to Hartnett, who said:

"There won't be anymore experimenting with Dean. If we can pitch him we'll keep him. If he can't pitch I'm not even sure he'll be with us at camp next spring."

Dean, who is twenty-nine years old, won seven games and lost one in 1938 and gained six wins against four defeats in 1939. With Tulsa, he has appeared in seventeen games compiling a record of eight won and six lost.

Manager Roy Johnson of the Tulsa club, former Chicago coach, said Dean looked better now than he had at any time since joining the Cubs and that he had acquired an easy sidearm motion for his free, three quarters overhand pitch.

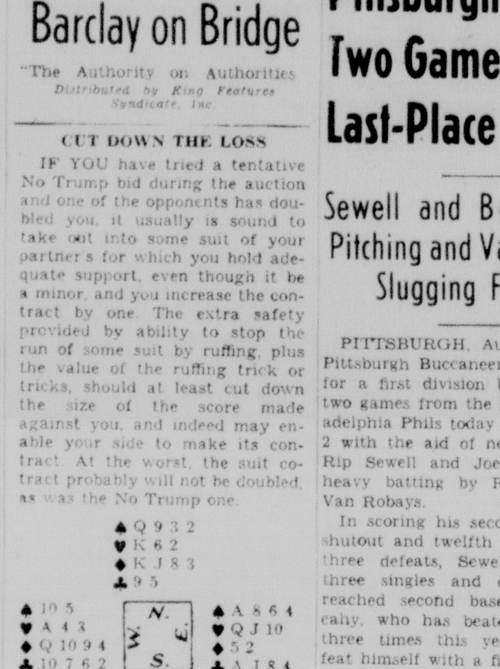
CUT DOWN THE LOSS

IF YOU have tried a tentative No Trump bid during the auction and one of the opponents has doubled you, it usually is sound to take out into some suit of your partner's for which you hold adequate support, even though it be a minor, and you increase the contract by one. The extra safety provided by ability to stop the run of some suit by ruffing, plus the value of the ruffing trick or tricks, should at least cut down the size of the score made against you, and indeed may enable your side to make its contract. At the worst, the suit contract probably will not be doubled, as was the No Trump one.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

North's pass of South's delayed deductive double was, of course, a business pass because he thought the side had a better chance to score well by beating the hostile contract than by trying some contract of its own. He felt that game could not be in the hand if South was unable to act until after the opponents had dropped the bidding.

North led the heart 6, which seemed likely to be his partner's suit. The 10 was played, next the high 8 signal, so North felt encouraged. West laid down the club A, then the 4 to the Q. South's heart 5 was finessed by West to the K, and North's 2 knocked out the heart A. The club 6 went to the K, the heart 9 was cashed, then the diamond A won and a diamond went to the J. North then led the spade 2 to the A. The club 10 was then cashed, but the defenders took the last three tricks with the diamond K and two spades, setting the contract two.

If West on his last turn had bid 2-Clubs, the side could have been set only one trick, and that probably not doubled. One spade, one heart, two diamond and two club tricks are all that could have been taken by the defense, barring unusual developments in the play.

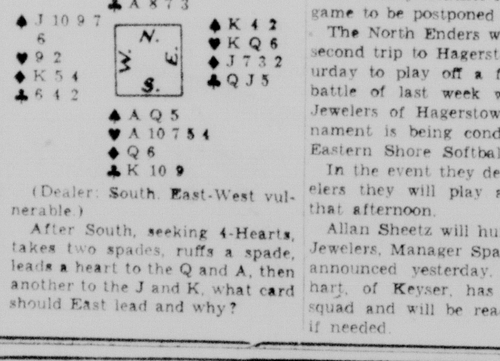
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

After South, seeking 4-Hearts, takes two spades, ruffs a spade, leads a heart to the Q and A, then another to the J and K, what card should East lead and why?

Pittsburgh Wins Two Games from Last-Place Phils

Sewell and Bowman's Pitching and Van Robay's Slugging Feature

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Buccaneers, driving hard for a first division berth, snatched two games from the last-place Philadelphia Phils today 5 to 0 and 5 to 2 with the aid of neat pitching by Rip Sewell and Joe Bowman and heavy batting by Rookie Maurice Van Robays.

In scoring his second consecutive shutout and twelfth victory against three defeats, Sewell allowed but three singles and only one man reached second base. Hugh Mulcahy, who has beaten the Pirates three times this year helped defeat himself with a first inning wild pitch which let two runners score.

Van Robays got two singles in the first contest and knocked in four of the second game markers with a home run and a double.

North End Merchants Getting Primed for Several Tough Games

The North End Merchants are getting primed for two and perhaps three important games this week. The last half champions of the City Softball league will battle the Keegan Gassers in the first of a three-game series to decide the City League championship Friday afternoon at 5:30 at Community Park. Rainy weather has caused the game to be postponed twice.

The North Enders will make their second trip to Hagerstown this Saturday to play off a first-round tie battle of last week with the Kay Jewelers of Hagerstown. The tournament is being conducted by the Eastern Shore Softball Association.

In the event they defeat the Jewelers they will play another game that afternoon.

Allan Sheetz will hurl against the Jewelers, Manager Sparky Chisholm announced yesterday. Dick Fromharj, of Keyser, has rejoined the squad and will be ready for action if needed.

JOCKEY RATINGS

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 28—A group of wellknown trainers here were discussing jockeys—the best and the worst—with all the wherefores and the whys. In the subtle art of knowing and handling pace they gave George Woolf the call.

"For example," one of the veteran trainers said, "Earl Sande belonged to the old Father Bill Daly school of "Get the jump, keep it if you can—and ride 'em out.' This works for some horses but it doesn't work for others. George Woolf can pace a horse perfectly. He seems to know exactly how much pace a horse can handle to be ready for the stretch and the way to the wire."

"I'll agree with you here," another trainer said, "but the best of all at this art was Tod Sloan. In addition to his handling pace, Sloan was the best all-around jockey I ever saw. He always seemed to know exactly what a horse was thinking about at any stage of the race."

"Another feature of Sloan's riding," John Partridge said, "was the fact that he rarely used the whip. I'd like to say here that more horses have been whipped out than have been whipped in. A tap or a flick, just enough to let the horse know you are looking for something extra, won't hurt. But I don't believe whipping horses helps them to win."

More Ratings

Ben Jones agreed with John Partridge on this point and you can remember both know their trade. So doees Jim Sunny Fitzsimmons, another great trainer.

"If you want my jockey rating," one of the best known ex-jockeys and trainers added, "I'll give it to you. Post riding—Dave Nichols and Don Meade; I know of no others better at getting a mount away.

"I'll take Woolf for pace. I'll take Johnny Adams for position; he is rarely bottled up. For strong finishing you can also give me Adams. Tod Sloan was probably the best all-around jockey, but if you move the selection up to 1940 I'll travel with Eddie Arcaro. He is about the best I've seen in some time.

"I'll slip you another fine jockey who shouldn't be overlooked. I'm talking about Laverne Fator.

"Fator's name brought a general nod from the group. Nash Turner was another who came in for a fancy bouquet of wild laurel blossoms.

Bookmakers And Mutuels

"Few people understood the advantage a licensed bookmaker can bring both the bigger and the smaller players," one of the bookie mandarins told me.

"Here's what I mean. Suppose a horse hangs around 6 to 1. Up to this point he gets most of his backing from the $2 and $5 bettors. Then some bigger better chucks in $2,000 or more. The 6 to 1 drops to 4 to 1. A few more big bets and he is only 2 to 1. So the $2 and the $5 bettors may only get a third or half of what they might have won.

"But if tracks had licensed bookmakers as they do in England and other racing countries, the big bettor would stay away from the mutuels and protect both himself and the smaller player."

"Wouldn't the bookmaker lay off part or all of his play in the machines" I asked.

"Why?" he asked. "If I am betting 5 to 1 a horse won't win, why should I drive the price down to 2 to 1 that he will win? I'd have to bet twice as much money to break even. That wouldn't be the best way I know to make any money."

"As it is today," one big player, a well-known owner said, "about forty per cent of all money bet on races is placed with book-makers. You won't find many bettors tossing in $5,000 or more through the mutuel window. They would only be playing against their own money.

"The point has been raised that the track and state might have trouble collecting their share in taxes if bookmakers were licensed. Along this line the state would have to make a careful selection. I doubt that many licensed bookmakers would run the risk of indictment by holding back. Even if a few did, both track and state would get a much larger percentage of the money bet than they would get today. The point is also well taken that the smaller player would profit just as the heavier bettor. There may be a number of details that might carry a few snarls.

"But the advantages of linking bookmakers with the mutuel machines outweigh the disadvantages."

It is, at least, an interesting argument. If it could be handled and guarded properly it would have certain beneficial effects for the track, the state, the bigger and the smaller bettors.

There may be objections that haven't been brought out. If so, why not bring them up? This is no ballyhoo for the bookmakers, but a point in the interest of racing, including all concerned.

And efforts to stamp out bookmaking will be exactly as effective as former efforts to enforce prohibition and prevent the absorption of Scotch, rye, bourbon and gin.

Dizzy Dean Is Recalled by Chicago Cubs

Former Star Major League Pitcher Will Be Given Final Chance

Recall of the lanky hurler from Tulsa of the Texas League was announced today by the Cub Manager, Gabby Hartnett, who said he hoped to have Dean ready for duty in the Cincinnati series opening here Sept. 7.

The eccentric, colorful moundsman, who won thirty games to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a pennant in 1934, has been with Tulsa since early in June. He'd asked to be sent there so he could experiment with a new side arm delivery after he had started five times for the Cubs and completed only one game.

Dean, who cost the Cubs $185,000 in cash and three players in 1938, now faces his great chance to recapture at least a part of the hurling glory that once was his. This will be his final chance with the Cubs, according to Hartnett, who said:

"There won't be anymore experimenting with Dean. If we can pitch him we'll keep him. If he can't pitch I'm not even sure he'll be with us at camp next spring."

Dean, who is twenty-nine years old, won seven games and lost one in 1938 and gained six wins against four defeats in 1939. With Tulsa, he has appeared in seventeen games compiling a record of eight won and six lost.

Manager Roy Johnson of the Tulsa club, former Chicago coach, said Dean looked better now than he had at any time since joining the Cubs and that he had acquired an easy sidearm motion for his free, three quarters overhand pitch.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas floats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills, 10¢ and 25¢.

CUT DOWN THE LOSS

IF YOU have tried a tentative No Trump bid during the auction and one of the opponents has doubled you, it usually is sound to take out into some suit of your partner's for which you hold adequate support, even though it be a minor, and you increase the contract by one. The extra safety provided by ability to stop the run of some suit by ruffing, plus the value of the ruffing trick or tricks, should at least cut down the size of the score made against you, and indeed may enable your side to make its contract. At the worst, the suit contract probably will not be doubled, as was the No Trump one.

	♠ Q 9 3 2 ♥ K 6 2 ♦ K J 8 3 ♣ 9 5
♠ 10 5 ♥ A 4 3 ♦ Q 10 9 4 ♣ 10 7 6 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ A 8 6 4 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 5 2 ♣ A J 8 4
	♠ K J 7 ♥ 9 8 7 5 ♦ A 7 6 ♣ K Q 3

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

North's pass of South's delayed deductive double was, of course, a business pass because he thought the side had a better chance to score well by beating the hostile contract than by trying some contract of its own. He felt that game could not be in the hand if South was unable to act until after the opponents had dropped the bidding.

North led the heart 6, which seemed likely to be his partner's suit. The 10 was played, next the high 8 signal, so North felt encouraged. West laid down the club A, then the 4 to the Q. South's heart 5 was finessed by West to the K, and North's 2 knocked out the heart A. The club 6 went to the K, the heart 9 was cashed, then the diamond A won and a diamond went to the J. North then led the spade 2 to the A. The club 10 was then cashed, but the defenders took the last three tricks with the diamond K and two spades, setting the contract two.

If West on his last turn had bid 2-Clubs, the side could have been set only one trick, and that probably not doubled. One spade, one heart, two diamond and two club tricks are all that could have been taken by the defense, barring unusual developments in the play.

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ 8 3 ♥ J 8 3 ♦ A 10 9 8 ♣ A 8 7 3
♠ J 10 9 7 6 ♥ 9 2 ♦ K 5 4 ♣ 6 4 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ K 4 2 ♥ K Q 6 ♦ J 7 3 2 ♣ Q J 5
	♠ A Q 5 ♥ A 10 7 5 4 ♦ Q 6 ♣ K 10 9

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

After South, seeking 4-Hearts, takes two spades, ruffs a spade, leads a heart to the Q and A, then another to the J and K, what card should East lead and why?

Pittsburgh Wins Two Games from Last-Place Phils

Sewell and Bowman's Pitching and Van Robay's Slugging Feature

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Buccaneers, driving hard for a first division berth, snatched two games from the last-place Philadelphia Phils today 5 to 0 and 5 to 2 with the aid of neat pitching by Rip Sewell and Joe Bowman and heavy batting by Rookie Maurice Van Robays.

In scoring his second consecutive shutout and twelfth victory against three defeats, Sewell allowed but three singles and only one man reached second base. Hugh Mulcahy, who has beaten the Pirates three times this year, helped defeat himself with a first inning wild pitch which let two runners score.

Van Robays got two singles in the first contest and knocked in four of the second game markers with a home run and a double.

North End Merchants Getting Primed for Several Tough Games

The North End Merchants are getting primed for two and perhaps three important games this week. The last half champions of the City Softball league will battle the Keegan Gassers in the first of a three-game series to decide the City League championship Friday afternoon at 5:30 at Community Park. Rainy weather has caused the game to be postponed twice.

The North Enders will make their second trip to Hagerstown this Saturday to play off a first-round tie battle of last week with the Kay Jewelers of Hagerstown. The tournament is being conducted by the Eastern Shore Softball Association.

In the event they defeat the Jewelers they will play another game that afternoon.

Allan Sheetz will hurl against the Jewelers, Manager Sparky Chisholm announced yesterday. Dick Fromhart, of Keyser, has rejoined the squad and will be ready for action if needed.

Trapshooters To Practice At Ali Ghan Club Today

The Cumberland Shrine Gun Club will hold a practice trap shoot today at the Ali Ghan Country Club at 2:30 p. m. All trapshooters are welcome to attend.

JOCKEY RATINGS

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 28—A group of wellknown trainers here were discussing jockeys—the best and the worst—with all the wherefores and the whys. In the subtle art of knowing and handling pace they gave George Woolf the call.

"For example," one of the veteran trainers said, "Earl Sande belonged to the old Father Bill Daly school of "Get the jump, keep it if you can—and ride 'em out.' This works for some horses but it doesn't work for others. George Woolf can pace a horse perfectly. He seems to know exactly how much pace a horse can handle to be ready for the stretch and the way to the wire."

"I'll agree with you here," another trainer said, "but the best of all at this art was Tod Sloan. In addition to his handling pace, Sloan was the best all-around jockey I ever saw. He always seemed to know exactly what a horse was thinking about at any stage of the race."

"Another feature of Sloan's riding," John Partridge said, "was the fact that he rarely used the whip. I'd like to say here that more horses have been whipped out than have been whipped in. A tap or a flick, just enough to let the horse know you are looking for something extra, won't hurt. But I don't believe whipping horses helps them to win."

More Ratings

Ben Jones agreed with John Partridge on this point and you can remember both know their trade. So doees Jim Sunny Fitzsimmons, another great trainer.

"If you want my jockey rating," one of the best known ex-jockeys and trainers added, "I'll give it to you. Post riding—Dave Nichols and Don Meade; I know of no others better at getting a mount away.

"I'll take Woolf for pace, I'll take Johnny Adams for position; he is rarely bottled up. For strong finishing you can also give me Adams. Tod Sloan was probably the best all-around jockey, but if you move the selection up to 1940 I'll travel with Eddie Arcaro. He is about the best I've seen in some time.

"I'll slip you another fine jockey who shouldn't be overlooked. I'm talking about Laverne Fator.

"Fator's name brought a general nod from the group. Nash Turner was another who came in for a fancy bouquet of wild laurel blossoms.

Bookmakers And Mutuels

"Few people understood the advantage a licensed bookmaker can bring both the bigger and the smaller players," one of the bookie mandarins told me.

"Here's what I mean. Suppose a horse hangs around 6 to 1. Up to this point he gets most of his backing from the $2 and $5 bettors. Then some bigger better chucks in $2,000 or more. The 6 to 1 drops to 4 to 1. A few more big bets and he is only 2 to 1. So the $2 and the $5 bettors may only get a third or half of what they might have won.

"But if tracks had licensed bookmakers as they do in England and other racing countries, the big bettor would stay away from the mutuels and protect both himself and the smaller player."

"Wouldn't the bookmaker lay off part or all of his play in the machines" I asked.

"Why?" he asked. "If I am betting 5 to 1 a horse won't win, why should I drive the price down to 2 to 1 that he will win? I'd have to bet twice as much money to break even. That wouldn't be the best way I know to make any money."

"As it is today," one big player, a well-known owner said, "about forty per cent of all money bet on races is placed with book-makers. You won't find many bettors tossing in $5,000 or more through the mutuel window. They would only be playing against their own money.

"The point has been raised that the track and state might have trouble collecting their share in taxes if bookmakers were licensed. Along this line the state would have to make a careful selection. I doubt that many licensed bookmakers would run the risk of indictment by holding back. Even if a few did, both track and state would get a much larger percentage of the money bet than they would get today. The point is also well taken that the smaller player would profit just as the heavier bettor. There may be a number of details that might carry a few snarls.

"But the advantages of linking bookmakers with the mutuel machines outweigh the disadvantages."

It is, at least, an interesting argument. If it could be handled and guarded properly it would have certain beneficial effects for the track, the state, the bigger and the smaller bettors.

There may be objections that haven't been brought out. If so, why not bring them up? This is no ballyhoo for the bookmakers, but a point in the interest of racing, including all concerned.

And efforts to stamp out bookmaking will be exactly as effective as former efforts to enforce prohibition and prevent the absorption of Scotch, rye, bourbon and gin.

Gun Cotton, famous agent of Scotland Yard, arrives in London and delivers a mysterious small packet to his superior, known as X, despite several attempts which have been made to take it from him. Tired and worn from his nerve-wracking assignment, he takes a taxi to Slechther's Egyptian Ray-Baths. Beginning to suspect the place is some kind of a "front," Cotton notices a stranger, tattooed with an Egyptian symbol, who calls himself Pullinger. The agent becomes more interested when he notes that what appeared to be a tattoo is becoming fainter.

CHAPTER SIX

GUN DECIDED that it would be tactful for him to make his exit in advance of Pullinger. After all, nothing was likely to happen in the coffee room.

He did as the apparent habitues did—handed his bathrobe to an attendant, who rolled it up and thrust it into a numbered pigeon hole, handing Gun a small metal disc with a similar number on it, which had a clip to fasten it on to the tape securing his keys to his wrist. Then he strolled carelessly out into the blaze of imitation sunshine, which he found delightfully warm. The air, apparently, was treated, and seemed to have a faint perfume of flowers about it. Gun decided that they did the thing pretty well!

"Outside," if one could so describe it, Gun received something of a shock, for he suddenly heard his name called in a rather shrill, feminine voice.

He turned hastily, cursing under his breath, for he did not want his name yelled all over the place!

As he did so, a long, leggy, but not unpleasing female form sprang up from a sandy couch, and Gun saw that it was Daphne Shelton, who was a niece of Charles Cazelton, a rather wild and precocious young woman of 16 years, who was commonly known by her friends as Squibs.

"Why, hello, Gun!" was her greeting. "What's the [illegible] anyway are you trying to slim, or something?"

"Nothing like it—and I hope you're not, either!" And Gun ran a comprehensive eye over her decidedly slender form.

"Oh, no!" answered Daphne, with unruffled complacency. "I'm just about right—or I think so, at any rate. The fact is, I had rather a terrible night last night, and this is about the finest place in the world to pull your stockings up after a night like that."

"The gap you have left in the nursery still yawns for you, my dear child. Why not return to it, before it's too, too late?"

"Don't be a beast, Methuselah. I think you're horrid."

"Yes, I've been thinking that for some time."

Out of the corner of his eye Gun saw Pullinger emerge from the coffee room. He wore an air of nonchalance, but from a certain stiffness in his bearing Gun realized that he was interested. Not knowing Gun was watching him, he paused for a moment, glanced around with elaborate carelessness, and then strolled casually in their direction.

He wanted to know more about Daphne—Gun determined that he should. Daphne was pretending to be annoyed. It was a habit of hers which she imagined was fascinating—as perhaps it was, to the very young men. Gun saw how, for once, it might be made useful!

He waited until Pullinger was within earshot, and then, without palpably raising his voice, he spoke in a tone which would easily be audible to him:

"But, my dear girl, don't be so stupid. I tell you I haven't been hanging about at all. I was here to kill time, and just went through the ordinary routine of the baths. I was even so certain you wouldn't be here yourself that I had a cup of coffee in there—and then I saw you and came hurrying out right away!" Gun's tone was that of a man unjustly accused, and defending himself with a touch of irritability. He saw that Pullinger was taking it all in. "If you had to wait, my sweet," he added, "it was your own fault. You must have got here early."

Daphne was staring at him in utter bewilderment, wondering what on earth he was talking about. Luckily her expressive face was turned away from Pullinger, who could not see it. But at any moment she would burst into speech and, as has been indicated already, Daphne had a singularly penetrating voice.

Gun saw the girl pause and hesitate and in another second Pullinger had spoken to her.

Gun suddenly assumed an air of boisterous good humor.

"Now no more nonsense," he cried. "Come and wash your sulks away. . . ."

He caught her by the waist, forcibly ran her to the edge of the pool, and plunged in with her. The water was warm and pleasant, but Daphne did not seem to appreciate it.

She came up spluttering, and with battle in her eye.

"You blithering idiot!" she shouted at him. "What on earth do you think . . .?"

But Gun saw that Pullinger had followed them down to the water's edge, and was still within ear shot—of Daphne's voice, at any rate.

"Yes," he cried. "That's it!" And he pushed her under again.

She struggled gamely, but he followed her across to the other side. As she climbed out, and he after her, he noticed that Pullinger still was watching them from the other side of the pool. He seemed to be amused.

"You're beastly, Gun!" Daphne was nearly in tears. "You've made me all wet, and I didn't mean to go in. And you've ruined my face."

"Act of God!" grinned Gun, provokingly.

It had the effect he wanted. Daphne stamped her bare feet in fury, and exclaimed.

"I hate the sight of you, and I'll never speak to you again. Never . . . not for ages."

She flung herself around and stalked away from him, to disappear into the ladies' quarters, which was precisely what Gun desired. Pullinger turned away, looking more amused than ever. Gun thought, good work! He'd made it look as though he'd come to meet Daphne by appointment, and then had a row with her. Quite a good alibi, so far as Pullinger was concerned, and it must have looked very convincing to him.

Gun assumed a defiant air, as a man who knows he is in the right and intends to stick to his guns. He took a cigaret and a light from an attendant, and lay in the sand to dry off.

It was very pleasant in the artificial sunlight.

It was perhaps five minutes later that Gun saw a girl emerge from the ladies' doorway and registered attention. So did every other man who saw her.

She had the figure and carriage of a young Diana, and her scanty green swimming suit made a striking contrast to an aureole of flame-colored hair. Her rather elfin face, with its faintly blue eyes and full, generous mouth, was surrounded by a nimbus of living fire. Her limbs were slender, shapely and sun burned. She could hardly be called beautiful, but was certainly amazingly attractive, Gun decided.

She stood there for a moment looking around her, and Gun got the impression that she was looking for somebody. This impression was increased as she started to walk slowly round the pool. She was eyeing the men, but with a careless, distant gaze that took no notice of their smiles and looks of invitation.

She passed Gun himself, and he knew that she had not looked at his face at all. Gun lay on the sand, apparently quite indifferent, but watching her all the time very closely.

Half-way round the pool Pullinger was standing. His eyes were on the girl, and as she drew nearer he turned deliberately, so that the "tattooed" symbol on his arm was visible to her.

Gun saw her pause and hesitate, and in another moment Pullinger had spoken to her. She smiled at him radiantly, and extended a slender hand, which he took in his. A moment later they were strolling along together.

Gun rose leisurely, and leisurely strolled around the pool in the same direction as themselves. When he had gone a third of the way around, he lay down again. But this time in a totally different position. Whereas before he had been close to the edge of the pool, on his back with his feet toward it, now he lay on his face, some distance from the water, and with his head in its direction. He thanked his stars that all men looked much the same clad in those white shorts, and with the face concealed.

Parents Can Prepare Children At Home for School Arithmetic

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

The little child of four or five likes at play to count to five or ten. He likes to use numbers as he handles things. The wise parent, who counts two or three objects (later four or five) or refers to the total number as the child handles or plays with these objects, in a casual conversational way, can stimulate healthy interest in this little child in numbers.

However, many a parent is tempted to burden the little tyke with lessons in numbers, forcing them upon him as tasks, even growing vexed at him when he grows grows weary or makes an error. She probably has in mind then preparing this youngster to show her relatives how smart he is, or how much smarter than Cousin Oliver.

One good way to amuse the tot of three or four is to have him bring you two blocks, say. If he brings you for or five when you say two, reveal no surprise, ridicule or annoyance. Merely show him how many two are and let it go at that, and allow him to shift attention elsewhere. He may really know two and more-than-two. Or if he knows three, any larger number may be "more-than-three or a whole lot." Number concepts come rather slowly to the little child. Don't expect much of him. Almost surely he knows of fewer numbers in terms of their meaning that you suppose he does. He might be able to count 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, without knowing how many five are. Or he might count by merely saying the numbers in sequence without being able to count as many things.

In case he is willing, it may be well to induce him to count objects by handing him one at a time. But be sure not to keep him at this practice long, never beyond the point where he is eagerly interested.

If your child of four or five likes to print with large black crayons, make a figure like 3 (very, very large) and encourage him to print it. Guide him so that he makes it in the right direction.

Game of Flinch

Flinch cards are fine to give the tot, even of two or three. Say nothing then about the numbers. Let the youngster merely manipulate the cards. By and by, maybe when he is about four, call to his attention the numbers on these cards. Name for him the first few numbers in the series. Then he might like to see these same few numbers in a book or magazine or newspaper. Later he will probably ask you what certain of the other numbers are.

By the time this child is five or six he might want to play Flinch. Many a child at six or earlier has done so. If he does, see what familiarity with number symbols and sequence he has learned and how useful to him for his school work later. Dominoes may also prove of great number-learning value to the child of six or seven. Please don't encourage your child to add before he begins to do so at school, else he will probably just count out the numbers and build up barriers, therefore, to efficient learning by heart of the basal addition facts later.

Parents who would like to have their children above the second grade memorize (a few at a time) the basal, simple 100 addition and 100 subtraction facts and receive a list of self-teaching exercises in arithmetic, should write me at 235 East Forty-Fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

When Fulton invented the steam-boat, he took the patents to France with the view of selling them to Napoleon, who was then at war with England.

Napoleon wouldn't so much as see Fulton.

Later it was pretty generally admitted that the steam-boat would have enabled Napoleon to baffle the winds and tides of the English Channel and land his troops on English soil.

Gun's tone was that of a man unjustly accused, and defending himself with a touch of irritability. He saw that Pullinger was taking it all in. "If you had to wait, my sweet," he added, "it was your own fault. You must have got here early."

Daphne was staring at him in utter bewilderment, wondering what on earth he was talking about. Luckily her expressive face was turned away from Pullinger, who could not see it. But at any moment she would burst into speech and, as has been indicated already, Daphne had a singularly penetrating voice.

Gun saw the girl pause and hesitate and in another second Pullinger had spoken to her.

Gun suddenly assumed an air of boisterous good humor.

"Now no more nonsense," he cried. "Come and wash your sulks away. . . ."

He caught her by the waist, forcibly ran her to the edge of the pool, and plunged in with her. The water was warm and pleasant, but Daphne did not seem to appreciate it.

She came up spluttering, and with battle in her eye.

"You blithering idiot!" she shouted at him. "What on earth do you think . . .?"

But Gun saw that Pullinger had followed them down to the water's edge, and was still within ear shot—of Daphne's voice, at any rate.

"Yes," he cried. "That's it!" And he pushed her under, again.

She struggled gamely, but he followed her across to the other side. As she climbed out, and he after her, he noticed that Pullinger still was watching them from the other side of the pool. He seemed to be amused.

"You're beastly, Gun!" Daphne was nearly in tears. "You've made me all wet, and I didn't mean to go in. And you've ruined my face."

"Act of God!" grinned Gun, provokingly.

It had the effect he wanted. Daphne stamped her bare feet in fury, and exclaimed.

"I hate the sight of you, and I'll never speak to you again. Never . . . not for ages."

She flung herself around and stalked away from him, to disappear into the ladies' quarters, which was precisely what Gun desired. Pullinger turned away, looking more amused than ever. Gun thought, good work! He'd made it look as though he'd come to meet Daphne by appointment, and then had a row with her. Quite a good alibi, so far as Pullinger was concerned, and it must have looked very convincing to him.

Gun assumed a defiant air, as a man who knows he is in the right and intends to stick to his guns. He took a cigaret and a light from an attendant, and lay in the sand to dry off.

It was very pleasant in the artificial sunlight.

It was perhaps five minutes later that Gun saw a girl emerge from the ladies' doorway and registered attention. So did every other man who saw her.

She had the figure and carriage of a young Diana, and her scanty green swimming suit made a striking contrast to an aureole of flame-colored hair. Her rather elfin face, with its faintly blue eyes and full, generous mouth, was surrounded by a nimbus of living fire. Her limbs were slender, shapely and sun burned. She could hardly be called beautiful, but was certainly amazingly attractive, Gun decided.

She stood there for a moment looking around her, and Gun got the impression that she was looking for somebody. This impression was increased as she started to walk slowly round the pool. She was eyeing the men, but with a careless, distant gaze that took no notice of their smiles and looks of invitation.

She passed Gun himself, and he knew that she had not looked at his face at all. Gun lay on the sand, apparently quite indifferent, but watching her all the time very closely.

Half-way round the pool Pullinger was standing. His eyes were on the girl, and as she drew nearer he turned deliberately, so that the "tattooed" symbol on his arm was visible to her.

Gun saw her pause and hesitate, and in another moment Pullinger had spoken to her. She smiled at him radiantly, and extended a slender hand, which he took in his. A moment later they were strolling along together.

Gun rose leisurely, and leisurely strolled around the pool in the same direction as themselves. When he had gone a third of the way around, he lay down again. But this time in a totally different position. Whereas before he had been close to the edge of the pool, on his back with his feet toward it, now he lay on his face, some distance from the water, and with his head in its direction. He thanked his stars that all men looked much the same clad in those white shorts, and with the face concealed.

Parents Can Prepare Children At Home for School Arithmetic

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

The little child of four or five likes at play to count to five or ten. He likes to use numbers as he handles things. The wise parent, who counts two or three objects (later four or five) or refers to the total number as the child handles or plays with these objects, in a casual conversational way, can stimulate healthy interest in this little child in numbers.

However, many a parent is tempted to burden the little tyke with lessons in numbers, forcing them upon him as tasks, even growing vexed at him when he grows grows weary or makes an error. She probably has in mind then preparing this youngster to show her relatives how smart he is, or how much smarter than Cousin Oliver.

One good way to amuse the tot of three or four is to have him bring you two blocks, say. If he brings you for or five when you say two, reveal no surprise, ridicule or annoyance. Merely show him how many two are and let it go at that, and allow him to shift attention elsewhere. He may really know two and more-than-two. Or if he knows three, any larger number may be "more-than-three or a whole lot." Number concepts come rather slowly to the little child. Don't expect much of him. Almost surely he knows of fewer numbers in terms of their meaning that you suppose he does. He might be able to count 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, without knowing how many five are. Or he might count by merely saying the numbers in sequence without being able to count as many things.

In case he is willing, it may be well to induce him to count objects by handing him one at a time. But be sure not to keep him at this practice long, never beyond the point where he is eagerly interested.

If your child of four or five likes to print with large black crayons, make a figure like 3 (very, very large) and encourage him to print it. Guide him so that he makes it in the right direction.

Game of Flinch

Flinch cards are fine to give the tot, even of two or three. Say nothing then about the numbers. Let the youngster merely manipulate the cards. By and by, maybe when he is about four, call to his attention the numbers on these cards. Name for him the first few numbers in the series. Then he might like to see these same few numbers in a book or magazine or newspaper. Later he will probably ask you what certain of the other numbers are.

By the time this child is five or six he might want to play Flinch. Many a child at six or earlier has done so. If he does, see what familiarity with number symbols and sequence he has learned and how useful to him for his school work later. Dominoes may also prove of great number-learning value to the child of six or seven. Please don't encourage your child to add before he begins to do so at school, else he will probably just count out the numbers and build up barriers, therefore, to efficient learning by heart of the basal addition facts later.

Parents who would like to have their children above the second grade memorize (a few at a time) the basal, simple 100 addition and 100 subtraction facts and receive a list of self-teaching exercises in arithmetic, should write me at 235 East Forty-Fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

John Marshall Highway Association To Hold Annual Picnic September 7

Citizens of Two Virginias Still Campaigning for New Road

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 28—Saturday, September 7, has been fixed at the date for the John Marshall highway picnic and celebration, according to Newton W. Bordon, secretary of the Strasburg, Va., Chamber of Commerce. The all-day affair will be held at the Wardensville campgrounds.

The Wardensville Board of Trade and the Strasburg Chamber of Commerce are trying to secure an outstanding list of speakers for the occasion and have invited Senator M. M. Neely of West Virginia, Senator Harry Byrd and Congressman Willis Robertson of Virginia to appear.

The John Marshall Highway Association has for years been working in the interest of the completion of the road linking West Virginia's state capital with the national capital. The proposed highway would follow State Route 4 to Moorefield, then cut across the mountain through Baker to Wardensville, then east to Strasburg and into Washington. This route would be the most direct route between the two capitals.

The Wardensville camp grounds are located one mile north of Wardensville on the new paved highway to the Virginia line.

Man First Thought To Be Suicide Hunted as Slayer of Divorcee

WEBSTER SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 28 (AP)—State Police Corporal G. F. Parsons asserted today authorities were ready to discard a theory that John Fitzwater killed himself and were searching for him in the Nicholas county hills on charges he shot to death a Camden-on-Gauley divorcee.

Nicholas and Webster county officers "have about changed" their minds, Parsons said, on their original assumption that the merchant, 40, had taken his own life after Mrs. Jessie Wood, 23, was killed.

Parsons said detachments searching for Fitzwater, a former member of the Nicholas county court, also had warrants charging him with critically wounding Mrs. Wood's nephew, Charles Wood, 17.

Wood was not expected to live.

Harold Hyatt, 22, employe of a lumber company, told officers that Mrs. Wood and her nephew were shot Monday night, but that he escaped injury by running into a thicket.

Hyatt had taken Mrs. Wood to a theater, he said, and when they left the show had been followed by Fitzwater.

Mrs. Wood was killed while she sat in a car which stopped about a mile and a half from Webster Springs.

Her nephew was taken to a Richwood hospital.

Pajama Plant Expansion Urged At Frostburg

Speakers at Annual Union Banquet Stress Need for New Building

FROSTBURG, Aug. 28—The annual banquet of Local 131, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, consisting of employes of the Michael Berkowitz Company, pajama factory here, at the Gunter hotel last evening was featured by addresses stressing the necessity of a new building for the Frostburg plant in order to provide for the expansion of the company's business and to give work to an increasing number of persons in this community.

Speakers included Ralph M. Race, representing the Junior Chamber of Commerce; City Commissioner William Lemmert, representing Mayor Olin Gunnett; Sol Fisher, New York, president of the company; Sol Robson, local manager; John Sabczag, Pittsburgh; Gene Fraczki and Irvin Gersh, New York, union representatives; Miss Irene Brownfield, president of the Uniontown local; and Nick Klamaski, president of the Amalgamated Cutters' local at Uniontown.

Entertainment features were supplied by Miss Mary Frances Comer in novelty dance numbers and the Chamber Brothers, acrobatic dancers.

Shoulder corsages were presented to Misses Della Offman, Lillian and Amanda Reckley, Clementine Richards and Anna Belle Spitznas, who have been in the employ of the company twenty-four years. Misses Catherine Winters, Catherine Brode and Anna Baker were given honorable mention for twenty-one years of service.

Corsages were also presented to Mrs. Elizabeth Odgers, president; Mary Powell, secretary, and Edna Geary, treasurer of the Frostburg local.

Mrs. Odgers presided and the invocation was offered by Miss Elizabeth Lapp. Dancing followed the banquet.

School Bus Fleet Of Mineral County Gets Police Okay

Thirty Vehicles Declared in Perfect Condition after Check-up

KEYSER, W. Va., Aug. 28—The office of County School Superintendent Paul C. Rouzer this afternoon announced that all thirty of the county school buses were found to be in perfect condition in a periodic check-up made today by State Police here.

Luke McDowell, clerk of the superintendent's office, said the buses are checked three times during each school year—just prior to the September opening, again in December, and a third time in March or April. Examination is made of brakes, steering mechanism, horns, tires and entrance and emergency doors, and other more or less minor points, McDowell stated.

Mineral county buses, checked today in preparation for the opening of schools here Tuesday, range in seating capacity from twelve to ninety, and carry a daily load of from 1,900 to 2,000 students to and from school, the clerk said. Total seating capacity of the carriers is 1,285, about one-third of them making more than one trip.

The two largest buses serve the Keyser and Ridgeley schools. A ninety-passenger carrier operates from Burlington to Keyser, and a bus accommodating seventy-five students runs from Short Gap to Ridgeley.

Newlyweds Honored

Eighteen were present at a miscellaneous shower last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Brown, Willow avenue, in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Keller. Mrs. Keller was Miss Ethel Brown before her recent marriage.

Guests were Mrs. William Miers, Mrs. A. C. Liller, Mrs. Thomas Roberts, Mrs. Henry Clark, Mrs. Wallace Westfall, Mrs. Clarence Westfall, Mrs. Glennie Schwinabart, Mrs. G. W. Haines, Mrs. Ora Bennett, Mrs. Thelma Harman, Mrs. Roy Miller, Mrs. Earl Purinton, Miss Elsie Tephabaugh, Miss Mildred Clark and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Brown.

Keyser Briefs

The annual Presbyterian Sunday school picnic, originally scheduled for this afternoon has been postponed until Monday, it was announced today. The picnic will be held at the Knights of Pythias grounds at Burlington. A truck will leave the church at 1 p. m. Monday.

The Ladies Aid Society of Grace Methodist church will exhibit "Golgotha," a talking picture of the Crucifixion, Tuesday night, September 10, in the Keyser school auditorium.

District 6, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold an all-day basket picnic Sunday, September 15, at Table Rock Inn on Route 50. All World war and Spanish-American war veterans will be invited, a VFW officer here said. District 6 includes VFW posts at Keyser, Petersburg, Martinsburg, Wardensville and Romney.

Book Chat Group Discusses Poetry

Prof. Alvin J. Miller Wins Contest at Grantsville Meeting

GRANTSVILLE, Aug. 28. — The second Boox Chat meeting held at the studio last evening was well-attended. The topic for the evening was "Poetry". Miss Carolyn Wallace gave a definition of epic poetry and read selections from Homer's "Illiad" and Longfellow's "Hiawatha." Miss Rhoda Bender, Springs, defined dramatic poetry, and Miss Virginia Friend, Friendsville, in costume, gave the reading scene from Stephen Phillip's "Viola and Francesca". Miss Rachel Holmes defined lyric poety.

Prof. Alvin J. Miller, Kent, O., who is visiting here, sang several selections. Prof. Miller and Miss Alta Schrock, Meyersdale, tied in the contest for naming the most poets in a given time, the prize being awarded to Mr. Miller after a few more minutes were allotted.

The third session of the group is to be held the third week in September.

Lightning Strikes Martin Residence At Westernport

Roof Destroyed and Kitchen Ceiling Damaged; Family Escapes

WESTERNPORT, Aug. 28—During the short but severe electrical storm yesterday afternoon, the house of Frederick Martin was struck by lightning. The roof was completely destroyed and the kitchen ceiling was badly damaged. The family, sitting on the back porch, escaped injury.

One transformer was burned out by the shock, and the fuses of two others were blown, leaving a number of families without electricity for several hours.

John Marshall Highway Association To Hold Annual Picnic September 7

Citizens of Two Virginias Still Campaigning for New Road

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 28—Saturday, September 7, has been fixed at the date for the John Marshall highway picnic and celebration, according to Newton W. Bordon, secretary of the Strasburg, Va., Chamber of Commerce. The all-day affair will be held at the Wardensville campgrounds.

The Wardensville Board of Trade and the Strasburg Chamber of Commerce are trying to secure an outstanding list of speakers for the occasion and have invited Senator M. M. Neely of West Virginia, Senator Harry Byrd and Congressman Willis Robertson of Virginia to appear.

The John Marshall Highway Association has for years been working in the interest of the completion of the road linking West Virginia's state capital with the national capital. The proposed highway would follow State Route 4 to Moorefield, then cut across the mountain through Baker to Wardensville, then east to Strasburg and into Washington. This route would be the most direct route between the two capitals.

The Wardensville camp grounds are located one mile north of Wardensville on the new paved highway to the Virginia line.

Man First Thought To Be Suicide Hunted as Slayer of Divorcee

WEBSTER SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 28 (AP)—State Police Corporal G. F. Parsons asserted today authorities were ready to discard a theory that John Fitzwater killed himself and were searching for him in the Nicholas county hills on charges he shot to death a Camden-on-Gauley divorcee.

Nicholas and Webster county officers "have about changed" their minds, Parsons said, on their original assumption that the merchant, 40, had taken his own life after Mrs. Jessie Wood, 23, was killed.

Parsons said detachments searching for Fitzwater, a former member of the Nicholas county court, also had warrants charging him with critically wounding Mrs. Wood's nephew, Charles Wood, 17.

Wood was not expected to live.

Harold Hyatt, 22, employe of a lumber company, told officers that Mrs. Wood and her nephew were shot Monday night, but that he escaped injury by running into a thicket.

Hyatt had taken Mrs. Wood to a theater, he said, and when they left the show had been followed by Fitzwater.

Mrs. Wood was killed while she sat in a car which stopped about a mile and a half from Webster Springs.

Her nephew was taken to a Richwood hospital.

Pajama Plant Expansion Urged At Frostburg

Speakers at Annual Union Banquet Stress Need for New Building

FROSTBURG, Aug. 28—The annual banquet of Local 131, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, consisting of employes of the Michael Berkowitz Company, pajama factory here, at the Gunter hotel last evening was featured by addresses stressing the necessity of a new building for the Frostburg plant in order to provide for the expansion of the company's business and to give work to an increasing number of persons in this community.

Speakers included Ralph M. Race, representing the Junior Chamber of Commerce; City Commissioner William Lemmert, representing Mayor Olin Gunnett; Sol Fisher, New York, president of the company; Sol Robson, local manager; John Sabczag, Pittsburgh; Gene Fraczki and Irvin Gersh, New York, union representatives; Miss Irene Brownfield, president of the Uniontown local; and Nick Klamaski, president of the Amalgamated Cutters' local at Uniontown.

Entertainment features were supplied by Miss Mary Frances Comer in novelty dance numbers and the Chamber Brothers, acrobatic dancers.

Shoulder corsages were presented to Misses Della Offman, Lillian and Amanda Reckley, Clementine Richards and Anna Belle Spitznas, who have been in the employ of the company twenty-four years. Misses Catherine Winters, Catherine Brode and Anna Baker were given honorable mention for twenty-one years of service.

Corsages were also presented to Mrs. Elizabeth Odgers, president; Mary Powell, secretary, and Edna Geary, treasurer of the Frostburg local.

Mrs. Odgers presided and the invocation was offered by Miss Elizabeth Lapp. Dancing followed the banquet.

Thirty Vehicles Declared in Perfect Condition after Check-up

KEYSER, W. Va., Aug. 28—The office of County School Superintendent Paul C. Rouzer this afternoon announced that all thirty of the county school buses were found to be in perfect condition in a periodic check-up made today by State Police here.

Luke McDowell, clerk of the superintendent's office, said the buses are checked three times during each school year—just prior to the September opening, again in December, and a third time in March or April. Examination is made of brakes, steering mechanism, horns, tires and entrance and emergency doors, and other more or less minor points, McDowell stated.

Mineral county buses, checked today in preparation for the opening of schools here Tuesday, range in seating capacity from twelve to ninety, and carry a daily load of from 1,900 to 2,000 students to and from school, the clerk said. Total seating capacity of the carriers is 1,285, about one-third of them making more than one trip.

The two largest buses serve the Keyser and Ridgeley schools. A ninety-passenger carrier operates from Burlington to Keyser, and a bus accommodating seventy-five students runs from Short Gap to Ridgeley.

Shoe Salesman Shot, Believed a Suicide

HUNGINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 28 (AP)—Samuel L. Brown, 52, salesman for a St. Louis shoe company, was found dead in the bedroom of his home today with a bullet wound in his temple.

Walter Morris, Brown's chauffeur, discovered the pajama-clad body when he returned from an errand. City Detective Julius May said a pistol lay nearby, and Coroner F. X. Schuller issued a tentative verdict of suicide pending a police investigation.

Brown, a native of Savannah, Ga., had resided here for fifteen years. His widow and two adopted children are visiting in Savannah.

Ross Alton Long, Cattle Dealer, Dies at Age 67

Bard, Pa., Man Known as One of Community's Leading Citizens

HYNDMAN, Pa., Aug. 28 — Ross Alton Long, of Bard, died at his country home Monday at the age of 67.

He was born at Schellsburg, Pa., April 18, 1873. He operated a large stock farm at Bard, which was considered a show place. On it he kept a large number of fine cattle, in the buying and selling of which he spent many years, and he was considered one of the most prosperous citizens of the community.

Mr. Long was a son of the late Samuel and Katherine Fisher Long. He was married October 7, 1893, to Lottie Ling, who survives, together with three daughters, Mrs. George Horn, Mann's Choice; Mrs. M. O. Meyers, Buffalo Mills; Mrs. Paul B. Koontz, Bedford; a brother, Frank Long, Pittsburgh; and two sisters, Mrs. L. B. Luter, Washington, Pa., and Mrs. R. L. Alshouse, Philadelphia.

He was a member of the Buffalo Mills Methodist church, the Grange and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Art-Crafts Class Meets

The art and crafts class sponsored by the Works Progress Administration met in the school auditorium Monday and Tuesday, with thirty-one persons in attendance, inclement weather conditions serving to cut down the enrollment.

Chief instructor was Morton S. Boyer, of Johnstown, capably assisted by a member of the staff of the Public Assistance Department, Bedford.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Keller, Miss Rose Deaner and Harvey Ziegler motored to York, where they spent Mohday and Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burkey and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Burkey, Beaverdale, Pa., were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Miller, Third avenue. Mrs. Arthur Burkey is Mrs. Miller's sister. The party was accompanied home by Miss Joyce Louise Burkey, who had spent several days in the Miller home here.

Donnie Dugan, Cumberland, was a Tuesday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bush and family.

David Burket and family have moved into one of the cottages on Church street owned by Paul Smith, Hyndman plumber. It had previously been occupied by the Merrill Kinton family.

Mrs. Lydia Kinton and son, Robert, have moved to Meyersdale.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Hitchcock, after spending several days vacationing at Atlantic City, N. J., stopped over in Hyndman for a visit with Mr. Hitchcock's mother, Mrs. Robert Wagner, before returning to their home at Akron, Ohio.

Several members of the Hyndman W. C. T. U. are planning to attend the Allegany county convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, to be held at Kingsley Methodist church, Cumberland, September 6. It had previously been erroneously reported that the Hyndman delegation would be guests of the Allegany county organization at a chicken supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Carpenter and son, Reuel, Clark Zebley and J. B. Poole were among those from Hyndman who attended the Townsend rally at Constitution park, Cumberland, Sunday afternoon.

Railroad Trespasser Loses Four Fingers In Box Car Mishap

A Chicago, Ill., man who apparently refused to heed words of advice today is a patient at Allegany hospital—minus four fingers.

Charles Wilson, 52, of North State street, was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night after four fingers on his left hand were cut off by the door of a railroad box car. His condition was reported "fairly good" last night.

The accident occurred in the Western Maryland Railway yards in Ridgeley, W. Va.

According to witnesses, Wilson was told not to board the car, but he paid no attention. The door slammed against his hand when another "side door pullman" rammed against the car he was boarding while a "train make-up" was in progress.

Railroad employees termed Wilson as a "trespasser."

Two Youths Arrested For Shooting Air Rifles in City

Two South Cumberland youths were arrested yesterday afternoon on charges of discharging an air rifle within the city limits.

One of the youths gave his name as Walter E. Grant, 18, of 310 Pennsylvania avenue. The other boy was fifteen years old.

Officer Raymond R. Johnston summoned them to appear this morning in police court for a hearing.

Mary Lashley, Mt. Savage, Invested As Candidate for Notre Dame Sisters

ON SIT-DOWN STRIKE

Nellie Kaminski, 17, holding her six-months-old baby, John, Jr., stages a sit-down strike in her husband's automobile parked in front of her mother-in-law's Philadelphia home. Mrs. Kaminski claims her husband, 20, deserted her.

MT. SAVAGE, Aug. 28 — Miss Mary Lashley was invested as a candidate in the order of the School Sisters of Notre Dame at special services this morning at 11 o'clock at St. Patrick's Catholic church. The Rev. Francis J. Egan, pastor, officiated.

Miss Lashley was accompanied to the altar rail by Sister Mary Robertine, superior of St. Patrick's school. She was invested at the foot of the Blessed Mother's altar.

After the investiture, a brief talk was given by Father Egan in which he described the three vocations of womanhood as marriage, maidenhood and religious orders. He enumerated the privileges, privations and blessings of the religious life and stated how fortunate a young woman was to be called to such a life. He concluded his talk with congratulations and best wishes to the candidate.

After the ceremony, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given. The girls' junior choir sang "Panus Anglicus" and "Mother at Thy Feet Is Kneeling." The altar was decorated in white hydrangia and asters with pink gladiolus.

Miss Lashley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lashley and one of a family of thirteen living children. She is a graduate of St. Patrick's high school and was employed by the Celanese Corporation.

Miss Lashley will leave this evening for Baltimore, where she will begin her studies at the Notre Dame normal school prior to becoming a teaching nun. After two years, she will take her first vows and become a novice in the order. Among the visitors at the services was Sister M. Veronica, S.N.D., Baltimore, a former teacher of Miss Lashley.

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
ON Modernizing YOUR KITCHEN
Q. I have seen pictures of perfectly beautiful kitchens in many leading magazines. Are these "stage set" or are they really possible in the average home?
A. The trend is toward such kitchens in ALL homes. Great advances have been made in kitchen equipment manufacture which are revolutionizing all previous ideas of kitchen design.
Q. Many of my friends have spent real money in "modernizing" their kitchens without getting results as shown in the pictures I have seen. Why is this?
A. Study the pictures and you will see that all the elements of the kitchen fit—in design, in color, in operating relation. There are no working gaps or lost space—no piecemeal arrangement of parts. The kitchen is a complete unit—the result of scientific planning of the whole room.
Q. Then must everything in a modern kitchen be new or especially built?
A. Not at all. You can plan your kitchen around any elements you choose. The most practical plan is to organize and "tie-up" your kitchen with standard wall cupboards, cabinets, table tops and accessories.
Q. But will standard units fit exactly?
A. Yes—if you choose from the Coppes line of equipment. This is the most complete line in America—offering you the greatest variety of styles and sizes—the greatest range of colors—the greatest choice of materials for your work table tops (wood, porcelain, modern metals or compositions—with or without sinks) and the greatest complement of accessories.
Q. Is Coppes equipment durable?
A. It will outlast the homes in which it is used. Hardwood construction throughout, with finest three coat, hand polished enamel finish. It is made by pioneers in scientific kitchen design—the oldest manufacturer of kitchen cabinets in America.
Q. Is it expensive?
A. Not necessarily. The "standard unit" idea enables you to get a modern kitchen to fit any budget.

Railroad Trespasser Loses Four Fingers In Box Car Mishap

A Chicago, Ill., man who apparently refused to heed words of advice today is a patient at Allegany hospital—minus four fingers.

Charles Wilson, 52, of North State street, was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night after four fingers on his left hand were cut off by the door of a railroad box car. His condition was reported "fairly good" last night.

The accident occurred in the Western Maryland Railway yards in Ridgeley, W. Va.

According to witnesses, Wilson was told not to board the car, but he paid no attention. The door slammed against his hand when another "side door pullman" rammed against the car he was boarding while a "train make-up" was in progress.

Railroad employees termed Wilson as a "trespasser."

Two South Cumberland youths were arrested yesterday afternoon on charges of discharging an air rifle within the city limits.

One of the youths gave his name as Walter E. Grant, 18, of 310 Pennsylvania avenue. The other boy was fifteen years old.

Officer Raymond R. Johnston summoned them to appear this morning in police court for a hearing.

Mary Lashley, Mt. Savage, Invested As Candidate for Notre Dame Sisters

ON SIT-DOWN STRIKE

Nellie Kaminski, 17, holding her six-months-old baby, John, Jr., stages a sit-down strike in her husband's automobile parked in front of her mother-in-law's Philadelphia home. Mrs. Kaminski claims her husband, 20, deserted her.

MT. SAVAGE, Aug. 28 — Miss Mary Lashley was invested as a candidate in the order of the School Sisters of Notre Dame at special services this morning at 11 o'clock at St. Patrick's Catholic church. The Rev. Francis J. Egan, pastor, officiated.

Miss Lashley was accompanied to the altar rail by Sister Mary Robertine, superior of St. Patrick's school. She was invested at the foot of the Blessed Mother's altar.

After the investiture, a brief talk was given by Father Egan in which he described the three vocations of womanhood as marriage, maidenhood and religious orders. He enumerated the privileges, privations and blessings of the religious life and stated how fortunate a young woman was to be called to such a life. He concluded his talk with congratulations and best wishes to the candidate.

After the ceremony, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given. The girls' junior choir sang "Panus Anglicus" and "Mother at Thy Feet Is Kneeling." The altar was decorated in white hydrangia and asters with pink gladiolus.

Miss Lashley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lashley and one of a family of thirteen living children. She is a graduate of St. Patrick's high school and was employed by the Celanese Corporation.

Miss Lashley will leave this evening for Baltimore, where she will begin her studies at the Notre Dame normal school prior to becoming a teaching nun. After two years, she will take her first vows and become a novice in the order. Among the visitors at the services was Sister M. Veronica, S.N.D., Baltimore, a former teacher of Miss Lashley.

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
ON Modernizing YOUR KITCHEN
Q. I have seen pictures of perfectly beautiful kitchens in many leading magazines. Are these "stage set" or are they really possible in the average home?
A. The trend is toward such kitchens in ALL homes. Great advances have been made in kitchen equipment manufacture which are revolutionizing all previous ideas of kitchen design.
Q. Many of my friends have spent real money in "modernizing" their kitchens without getting results as shown in the pictures I have seen. Why is this?
A. Study the pictures and you will see that all the elements of the kitchen fit—in design, in color, in operating relation. There are no working gaps or lost space—no piecemeal arrangement of parts. The kitchen is a complete unit—the result of scientific planning of the whole room.
Q. Then must everything in a modern kitchen be new or especially built?
A. Not at all. You can plan your kitchen around any elements you choose. The most practical plan is to organize and "tie-up" your kitchen with standard wall cupboards, cabinets, table tops and accessories.
Q. But will standard units fit exactly?
A. Yes—if you choose from the Coppes line of equipment. This is the most complete line in America—offering you the greatest variety of styles and sizes—the greatest range of colors—the greatest choice of materials for your work table tops (wood, porcelain, modern metals or compositions—with or without sinks) and the greatest complement of accessories.
Q. Is Coppes equipment durable?
A. It will outlast the homes in which it is used. Hardwood construction throughout, with finest three coat, hand polished enamel finish. It is made by pioneers in scientific kitchen design—the oldest manufacturer of kitchen cabinets in America.
Q. Is it expensive?
A. Not necessarily. The "standard unit" idea enables you to get a modern kitchen to fit any budget.

Stock Market Swings into Broad Advance with Several Gains Made

Outstanding Issues Are Up Fractions to More than Two Points

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP)—The stock market swung into a fairly broad advance today while dealings struck a faster stride. Many outstanding issues were up fractions to more than two points at the close.

On the upturn, dealings expanded to 381,570 shares and the Associated Press composite price of sixty stocks was up to .5 at 42.8.

War industry was well represented in the advance. Steels and aircrafts were quick to advance. Motors, coppers and rails joined the push. Corporate earnings reports in copper, machine tool and other lines were cited as indication of a growing boom in arms manufacturing.

South Porto Rico sugar jumped 2 1-4 to 19 3-4 on announcement of an extra dividend of ninety-five cents a share on the common. Up one to more than two were Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Telephone, Great Northern Preferred, Douglas, American Smelting, Air Reduction, Johns Manville, International Harvester and Westinghouse.

Many stocks in the curb list rose fractions to more than a point, including Gulf Oil, Aluminum, Ltd., American Gas and Electric, Niles Bement Pond and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Curb turnover increased to 59,000 shares.

SINGER AND DANCER

Blanche Ball, Blues Singer and dancer, is with the "Broadway Passing Show" showing at the Strand Friday and Saturday. On the screen is Broderick Crawford and Peggy Moran in "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

Theaters Today

Double Feature Is On Strand Program

The double feature program which includes Carole Landis in "The Mystery Sea Raider" and Jane Withers in "The Girl From Avenue A", shows for the last times today at the Strand theater.

Flashes of the Paradise Club, Winter Garden, Bali-Bali Club, Havana and Madrid and other Broadway spots will be brought to Cumberland on the stage of the Strand theater tomorrow and Friday in the "Broadway Passing Show."

The "Broadway Passing Show" has a musical comedy plot and story as well as a musical score. Contributing authors of this plot and score are Walter Winchell, Mark Hellinger, Bill (Aquacade) Rose and Mack Gordon of the team of Gordon and Revel.

The plot deals with police raids of Broadway resorts and theaters at the opening of the show all performers are hailed to court and present their performances before the presiding judge who elects the audience as the jury.

Added features are "Juno" and Princess Luana and her Bali girls. The screen show is the Universal comedy hit "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

Opening Sunday at 2 p. m. is Shirley Temple's last picture for Twentieth Century-Fox entitled "Young People." Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood and Arleen Whalen are co-starred.

Bob Burns Returns To a Familiar Role

Bob Burns, the fun-loving man with the bazooka and the relatives, is back the Universal comedy, "Alias the Deacon," which opened yesterday at the New Liberty theater.

He is the same Burns who created a new kind of screen humon a few years back with his first picture, "Rhythm On the Range," and he is all the more refreshing now because he is back again with the familiar Burns character.

The title role of "Alias the Deacon" was made to order for Burns, and he takes full advantage of his opportunities. In contrast to his recent screen appearances, Burns attempts no preachments. He plays his character for comedy and is content with that. And his portrayal of the philosophical card shark in the oil boom town is Burns to the life.

No less distinctive in his own way is Mischa Auer, the town's volatile barber, and it's the kind of role that nobody plays so well as he. The scene in which Auer has trouble with a temperamental barber chair is one of the comedy highlights of the picture.

Dennis O'Keefe and Peggy Moran, supply the romantic interest. In addition, the prizefight between O'Keefe and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams is one of the most realistic ever put on the screen.

Fields Provides Menace In Garden Picture

Jean Rogers, Chris-Pin Martin and Minor Watson are also featured in the picture.

Several hundred school students nearly ruined scenes for the latest Jones Family picture, "On Their Own," the Twentieth-Century-Fox film also showing at the Garden.

The script called for a bungalow court setting and the only one available was near a high school. As the equipment and actors rolled up, several students noticed them. In a few minutes it seemed as if a holiday had been declared. The crowd increased steadily and when preparations to shoot the scene were completed it was larger than a regular theater audience—and much more boisterous.

The scene was made, but not without anxious moments for the director.

Spring Byington, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan head the featured players.

Picture of Stage Play Is at the Embassy

When a boy meets a girl, you can expect romance, and when a salty old tar invades an old ladies' home, you can expect comedy. Both happen in "The Captain Is a Lady," which is on view at the Embassy theater.

Based on a stage play, by Rachel Crothers, whise "Susan and God" is one of the successes of the season, the picture combines romance and comedy in a story of life in a New England fishing village.

Two comparative newcomers to the screen are presented in the romantic roles. Virginia Grey, who first drew attention in "The Women" and later in "Thunder Afloat," is cast in the feminine lead, and Dan Dailey, Jr., a former musical comedy star, won the juvenile male lead on the strength of his first screen appearance in "The Mortal Storm." Headed by Charles Coburn and Beulah Bondi, the group taking the comedy roles includes Helen Broderick, Billie Burke, Helen Westley, Cecil Cunningham, Marjorie Main and Clem Bevans.

The story is about a boy and a girl who attempt to straighten out the financial difficulties of the girl's parents.

Also showing is Roy Rogers in "The Ranger and the Lady," the last day's showing of "The Crooked Road" and Edmund Lowe and Fred Scott in "Code of the Fearless."

Film about a Crime Reporter Is Offered

"Foreign Correspondent" is played by a cast headed by Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, George Sanders, Robert Benchley, Albert Basserman and Herbert Marshall.

The story concerns a crime reporter on a New York daily who is dispatched to Europe to dig up facts. The reporter, played masterfully by Joel McCrea, digs up more than he bargains for, cracking open an international intrigue that has never before been matched on the screen for thrills and excitement.

The final scene in "Foreign Correspondent," showing a large Clipper plane shot down from the air and the sea disaster which follows are high spots.

Stock Market Swings into Broad Advance with Several Gains Made

Outstanding Issues Are Up Fractions to More than Two Points

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP)—The stock market swung into a fairly broad advance today while dealings struck a faster stride. Many outstanding issues were up fractions to more than two points at the close.

On the upturn, dealings expanded to 381,570 shares and the Associated Press composite price of sixty stocks was up to .5 at 42.8.

War industry was well represented in the advance. Steels and aircrafts were quick to advance. Motors, coppers and rails joined the push. Corporate earnings reports in copper, machine tool and other lines were cited as indication of a growing boom in arms manufacturing.

South Porto Rico sugar jumped 2 1-4 to 19 3-4 on announcement of an extra dividend of ninety-five cents a share on the common. Up one to more than two were Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Telephone, Great Northern Preferred, Douglas, American Smelting, Air Reduction, Johns Manville, International Harvester and Westinghouse.

Many stocks in the curb list rose fractions to more than a point, including Gulf Oil, Aluminum, Ltd., American Gas and Electric, Niles Bement Pond and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Curb turnover increased to 59,000 shares.

Fields Provides Menace In Garden Picture

Jean Rogers, Chris-Pin Martin and Minor Watson are also featured in the picture.

Several hundred school students nearly ruined scenes for the latest Jones Family picture, "On Their Own," the Twentieth-Century-Fox film also showing at the Garden.

The script called for a bungalow court setting and the only one available was near a high school. As the equipment and actors rolled up, several students noticed them. In a few minutes it seemed as if a holiday had been declared. The crowd increased steadily and when preparations to shoot the scene were completed it was larger than a regular theater audience—and much more boisterous.

The scene was made, but not without anxious moments for the director.

SINGER AND DANCER

Theaters Today

Double Feature Is On Strand Program

The double feature program which includes Carole Landis in "The Mystery Sea Raider" and Jane Withers in "The Girl From Avenue A", shows for the last times today at the Strand theater.

Flashes of the Paradise Club, Winter Garden, Bali-Bali Club, Havana and Madrid and other Broadway spots will be brought to Cumberland on the stage of the Strand theater tomorrow and Friday in the "Broadway Passing Show."

The "Broadway Passing Show" has a musical comedy plot and story as well as a musical score. Contributing authors of this plot and score are Walter Winchell, Mark Hellinger, Bill (Aquacade) Rose and Mack Gordon of the team of Gordon and Revel.

The plot deals with police raids of Broadway resorts and theaters at the opening of the show all performers are hailed to court and present their performances before the presiding judge who elects the audience as the jury.

Added features are "Juno" and Princess Luana and her Bali girls. The screen show is the Universal comedy hit "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

Opening Sunday at 2 p. m. is Shirley Temple's last picture for Twentieth Century-Fox entitled "Young People." Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood and Arleen Whalen are co-starred.

Bob Burns Returns To a Familiar Role

Bob Burns, the fun-loving man with the bazooka and the relatives, is back the Universal comedy, "Alias the Deacon," which opened yesterday at the New Liberty theater.

He is the same Burns who created a new kind of screen humon a few years back with his first picture, "Rhythm On the Range," and he is all the more refreshing now because he is back again with the familiar Burns character.

The title role of "Alias the Deacon" was made to order for Burns, and he takes full advantage of his opportunities. In contrast to his recent screen appearances, Burns attempts no preachments. He plays his character for comedy and is content with that. And his portrayal of the philosophical card shark in the oil boom town is Burns to the life.

No less distinctive in his own way is Mischa Auer, the town's volatile barber, and it's the kind of role that nobody plays so well as he. The scene in which Auer has trouble with a temperamental barber chair is one of the comedy highlights of the picture.

Dennis O'Keefe and Peggy Moran, supply the romantic interest. In addition, the prizefight between O'Keefe and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams is one of the most realistic ever put on the screen.

Picture of Stage Play Is at the Embassy

When a boy meets a girl, you can expect romance, and when a salty old tar invades an old ladies' home, you can expect comedy. Both happen in "The Captain Is a Lady," which is on view at the Embassy theater.

Based on a stage play by Rachel Crothers, whise "Susan and God" is one of the successes of the season, the picture combines romance and comedy in a story of life in a New England fishing village.

Two comparative newcomers to the screen are presented in the romantic roles. Virginia Grey, who first drew attention in "The Women" and later in "Thunder Afloat," is cast in the feminine lead, and Dan Dailey, Jr., a former musical comedy star, won the juvenile male lead on the strength of his first screen appearance in "The Mortal Storm." Headed by Charles Coburn and Beulah Bondi, the group taking the comedy roles includes Helen Broderick, Billie Burke, Helen Westley, Cecil Cunningham, Marjorie Main and Clem Bevans.

The story is about a boy and a girl who attempt to straighten out the financial difficulties of the girl's parents.

Also showing is Roy Rogers in "The Ranger and the Lady," the last day's showing of "The Crooked Road" and Edmund Lowe and Fred Scott in "Code of the Fearless."

Film about a Crime Reporter Is Offered

"Foreign Correspondent" is played by a cast headed by Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, George Sanders, Robert Benchley, Albert Basserman and Herbert Marshall.

The story concerns a crime reporter on a New York daily who is dispatched to Europe to dig up facts. The reporter, played masterfully by Joel McCrea, digs up more than he bargains for, cracking open an international intrigue that has never before been matched on the screen for thrills and excitement. The final scene in "Foreign Correspondent," showing a large Clipper plane shot down from the air and the sea disaster which follows are high spots.

Big Gallery Sees Hagen in P.G.A. Tourney

The Haig Beams After Swamping Youthful Foes

Ed Dudley Makes Hole-in-one on 212 Yard Fifth Hole

By GAYLE TALBOT

HERSHEY, Pa., Aug. 28 (AP) — Some of the young sprouts shot a little better golf than he did, but Walt Hagen, the old codger from Detroit, had more fun than anybody as the P.G.A. championship went through the first two eighteen-hole rounds of match play today.

The field was reduced to sixteen competitors and Walt was one of them. The five-time former professional champion carried about all the gallery there was around with him as he laid it on two younger adversaries. He was beaming tonight like a new moon and rearing to get at his next announced victim, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, whom he engages in a thirty-six-hole marathon tomorrow.

If his legs will carry him that far, The Haig might prove difficult to turn back, at that. He wound up shooting even par for thirty-five holes today as he eased out young Gil Sellers of Hot Springs, Ark., one up, and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., two and one.

Gene Sarazen, one of Hagen's oldest and dearest rivals, still was in there pitching too, after opening victories over Stan Stazowski of Winsted, Conn., four and three, and Ray Mangrum, two and one. The Squire now holds a record of forty-three P.G.A. triumphs and Hagen is second with forty.

The colorful old adversaries could meet in the semi-finals though Sarazen faces the considerable job of trying to lick Henry Picard the defending champion, in one of tomorrow's eight matches.

Today's play ran remarkably true to form, considering the "sudden death" nature of eighteen-hole matches. Of the forty-eight players defeated during another day of rain, the only real big shots were Jimmy Demaret and Craig Wood.

Demaret Is Beaten

Demaret, the year's second biggest money winner, was beaten by Eddie Kirk, a comparative unknown from Farmington, Mich., two and one, in a second round match. Kirk never before qualified for P.G.A. match play. Demaret was sadly off his game, and he doesn't like match play, anyway.

Wood, the Mamaroneck veteran who holds records for reaching the finals of championships but never winning them, bowed in the second round to Jim Foulis, of Hinsdale, Ill., on the nineteenth hole.

Byron Nelson, who fought it out with Picard in last year's P.G.A. final, had a narrow escape when he had to go twenty holes to eliminate the veteran, Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J. Nelson, 1939 open champion, was too down through the eleventh hole and finally caught Walsh only by shooting a birdie on the seventeenth.

Dick Metz of Chicago, the medalist, continued to shoot the best golf of the meeting as he beat John Thoren of Auburndale, Mass., three and two, and Ky Laffoon of Chicago by the same score. For sixty-eight holes up to this point Metz was twelve strokes under par over a long, water logged course.

Picard continued to warn the boys that he means to hang on to his title. He waltzed through two matches today and was eight under par for sixty-five holes, closest approach to Metz's pattern.

Dudley Shoots Ace

The morning round produced a hole in one by Ed Dudley, Philadelphia star who sank his 212-yard tee shot on the fifth hole against Henry Bontempo of Springfield, Mass., it netted him $100 from a sporting goods firm and helped him trim Bontempo, five and four.

Others who remained in the running were Sam Snead, Jimmy Hines, Paul Runyan, Art Cuerk, of Uniontown, Pa.; Ben Hogan and Al Brosch, of Farmingdale, N. Y.

Tomorrow's matches starting at 8:30 (EST) pit in this order: Picard vs Sarazen; Hines vs Snead; Dudley vs Runyan; Hagen vs McSpaden; Metz vs Nelson; Clark vs Kirk; Brosch and Guldahl vs Foulis.

Denny Schute, the former P.G.A. champion who was operated upon for appendicitis last night, was reported doing all right. The P.G.A. sent him a check for $250. He won $100 of it by qualifying yesterday.

Sisk Paces Hitters On Evangelical Ten

Evangelical softballers of the South Cumberland Sunday School Softball League are being paced in batting by Mason Sisk, who in 121 trips to the plate has banged out 54 hits for a .446 average.

J. Miller with .437 for 112 appearance, is second while Teets with .416 for 96 attempts, is third. All but one member of the squad is hitting over .300 with the team's average .364. The batting records follow:

Indians Lead The League Despite The Dirty Looks

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 — The Cleveland ball club goes its way, with everybody hating everybody else and nobody speaking to the manager except his relatives, and still the Indians lead the American League, with as good a chance to win the pennant as any other team.

Of course, there are certain philosophers, including James Dykes, of Chicago, who hold that the cancer will take its toll before the end of the season.

"When they come down the stretch and play those final games with Detroit and the other Western clubs," predicts Mr. Dykes, "the heat will be on, and there's no substitute under pressure for team play and hustle. There's trouble on that club, and the rest of us will pick away at it. After all, it's our business to win, and if Cleveland has a weakness, we'll play to it."

Cleveland has trouble, all right. Ever since the majority of her regular players went to their employer, Alva Bradley, and asked him to fire Manager Oscar Vitt, interlocking feuds and hatreds have bloomed like skunk cabbage. Bradley's lukewarm, let's-pretend-not-to-notice-it attitude has done nothing to mend the breach.

Not on Speaking Terms

Mr. Harold Trosky, the large first baseman, and Mr. Ralston Hemsley, the temperance crusader, do not speak to Mr. Vitt, and Mr. Vitt does not speak to them. Mr. Robin Feller, the mad dog of the highway, frankly views Mr. Vitt as an impediment to his progress, and Mr. Vitt no longer dangles Robin on his knee.

Some of the younger players think Mr. Trosky and Mr. Feller are full of hop, and they take no pains to conceal it. All in all, it is quite the reverse of a Rotary picnic. A neutral observer cannot pass the Cleveland bench without suffering flesh wounds from the dirty looks flying back and forth.

This makes it hard to understand why Cleveland has played better ball than ever since the bad feeling broke loose, but the case is by no means unique in baseball history. Another team—a great team—won the American League pennant once in an atmosphere of pure and unstifled ill-will that makes the Cleveland team resemble a reunion of the class of '05.

Mr. James Dykes believes it is next to impossible to win without team co-operation and the old Frank Merriwell oomph. Manager of the White Sox himself, Mr. Dykes has forgotten the White (or Black) Sox of 1919.

Riddled With Hatred

I have it on the authority of Edward Throwbridge Collins, second baseman of the 1919 Chicago team, that no ball club in history was so pockmarked with feuds and riddled with good, clean internecine hatred. The cold silence that prevailed on the bench between teammate and teammate was interrupted from time to time when someone thought of a new and dirtier crack to make about someone else. Otherwise, the boys did not speak at all.

Mr. Chick Gandil, the first baseman, did not speak to Mr. Collins, the second baseman, though they played side by side all year and performed with great brilliance and technical harmony. Mr. Buck Weaver, the third baseman, did not speak to Mr. Ray Schalk, the catcher, and Mr. Schalk did not speak to any of the pitchers except Mr. Dick Kerr and Mr. Red Faber. Three infielders, two outfielders, and a couple of pitchers pretended at all times not to notice Mr. Kid Gleason, the manager, and Mr. Gleason had no use at all, personally, for some of his finest athletes.

Yet the White Sox won the pennant off by themselves that year, and would have won the World Series in a single gulp if they had not decided to dicker with Abe Attell and his gambling associates.

Another minor instance of friction which did not interfere with results was the fine corsican loathing Joe Tinker had for Johnny Evers, and vice versa, when these two gentlemen constituted one of the great second-base combinations of all time with the Chicago Cubs. They hated each other, and their rivalry on the field led to one tremendous play after another.

The Indians of 1940, therefore, may still get away with it. They have a couple of classic precedents in their favor. But if they do, James Dykes will swear there is no justice in the world, and will very likely decide to start hating his own players from the sound of the bell next year.

Commercial Bowling League Will Hold Organization Meeting

Leo Leasure, president of the Commercial Bowling League has announced that a meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Savoy to organize for the 1940-41 season.

Last sason the league operated with six clubs but Leasure said enough applications have been received to assure an eight or ten-team circuit for the coming season.

White Sox Beat Boston 3 to 2 In Hurling Duel

Dietrich Wins over Fleming in Sparkling Display of Elbowing

BOSTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—The second division Chicago White Sox crept to within one game of the fourth place Boston Red Sox today, capturing the opener of a two-game series 3 to 2 as Bill Dietrich triumphed over Rookie Bill Fleming in a sparkling pitching duel.

Each team collected five hits and Fleming, the Pacific Coast League strikeout king, gave up but three in the seven innings he worked. Joe Heving, who relieved after Fleming gave way to a pinch hitter, surrendered the other pair.

Fleming yielded all his hits in the second when Luke Appling and Taft Wright singled. Mike Tresh was passed to fill the bases and set the stage for Dietrich to drive Appling and Wright home with a sharp single.

Boston tied up the game with a two-run rally in the seventh.

Edward Gallagher Famed Wrestling Coach at Oklahoma A and M Dies

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 28. (AP)—Edwrd Clark Gallagher, 53-year-old wrestling coach who brought world fame to Oklahoma A. and M. college, lost his bout with pneumonia today.

The little Irishman, known as the "Knute Rockne of the mat," was stricken on his return from a mountain vacation in Colorado.

Although Gallagher himself was not a wrestler, his Oklahoma Aggies dominated the amateur wrestling field for a quarter of a century, winning 11 of the 13 National Intercollegiate tournaments held during that time.

His death came at a time when his teams had completed three consecutive undefeated seasons—with an unbroken string of 25 dual meet victories—and won four successive national crowns.

The scientific system he devised, based on the principles of leverage, will go on—taught by the hundreds of coaches who learned their lessons under him.

Giants Beat Cards 5 to 2 on Homers

Go into Tie for Third as Warneke Loses after Eight Wins

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 28 (AP) — The New York Giants climbed up into a tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for third place in the National League today by whipping the Cards 5 to 2.

The defeat ended Lon Warneke's string of eight straight hurling victories.

A home run by Jojo Moore with one mate aboard in the third inning and another four-bagger, by Tony Cuccinello in the ninth proved the Giants' margin of victory. The other runs were scored in the sixth on Frank Demaree's double, Babe Young's triple and a passed ball.

Spadaccini Is Recovering

CLEVELAND, Aug. 28—Vic Spadaccini, the Cleveland Rams' brilliant blocking quarterback, is recovering from a painful elbow injury, suffered in scrimmage. It was believed that Spadaccini's elbow was fractured, but X-rays failed to reveal it and the star blocker is expected to be ready to play in Cleveland's opening National Football League game with the Philadelphia Eagles here Sunday, Sept. 22.

Angott and Zivic All Set for Bout Tonight in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28 (AP) — Sammy Angott, the N.B.A. lightweight champion and Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh welterweight, both reported ready tonight for their 12-round bout at Forbes Field tomorrow night.

An interested spectator will be Henry Armstrong, the welterweight champion, who has signed to meet the winner here next month with the Pittsburgh Dapper Dan Club's charities sharing in the promotion.

Promoters expect between 15,000 and 20,000 fans to attend tomorrow's fight, which was postponed from Monday. Interest has been heightened by the demand of Charley Jones, Angott's manager, that the referee be instructed to declare a foul and give Angott the round every time Zivic holds with one hand and strikes with the other.

"Zivic has won most of his fights by these tactics," Jones charged.

Zivic, in turn has threatened to waive a $50 forfeit and enter the ring above the stipulated 145 pounds to give him more than ten pounds weight advantage over the tough champ from Washington, Pa., and Louisville, Ky.

Moroz is larger than Primo Carnera or Jess Willard.

Big Gallery Sees Hagen in P.G.A. Tourney

The Haig Beams After Swamping Youthful Foes

By GAYLE TALBOT

HERSHEY, Pa., Aug. 28 (AP) — Some of the young sprouts shot a little better golf than he did, but Walt Hagen, the old codger from Detroit, had more fun than anybody as the P.G.A. championship went through the first two eighteen-hole rounds of match play today.

The field was reduced to sixteen competitors and Walt was one of them. The five-time former professional champion carried about all the gallery there was around with him as he laid it on two younger adversaries. He was beaming tonight like a new moon and rearing to get at his next announced victim, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, whom he engages in a thirty-six-hole marathon tomorrow.

If his legs will carry him that far, The Haig might prove difficult to turn back, at that. He wound up shooting even par for thirty-five holes today as he eased out young Gil Sellers of Hot Springs, Ark., one up, and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., two and one.

Gene Sarazen, one of Hagen's oldest and dearest rivals, still was in there pitching too, after opening victories over Stan Stazowski of Winsted, Conn., four and three, and Ray Mangrum, two and one. The Squire now holds a record of forty-three P.G.A. triumphs and Hagen is second with forty.

The colorful old adversaries could meet in the semi-finals though Sarazen faces the considerable job of trying to lick Henry Picard the defending champion, in one of tomorrow's eight matches.

Today's play ran remarkably true to form, considering the "sudden death" nature of eighteen-hole matches. Of the forty-eight players defeated during another day of rain, the only real big shots were Jimmy Demaret and Craig Wood.

Demaret Is Beaten

Demaret, the year's second biggest money winner, was beaten by Eddie Kirk, a comparative unknown from Farmington, Mich., two and one, in a second round match. Kirk never before qualified for P.G.A. match play. Demaret was sadly off his game, and he doesn't like match play, anyway.

Wood, the Mamaroneck veteran who holds records for reaching the finals of championships but never winning them, bowed in the second round to Jim Foulis, of Hinsdale, Ill., on the nineteenth hole.

Byron Nelson, who fought it out with Picard in last year's P.G.A. final, had a narrow escape when he had to go twenty holes to eliminate the veteran, Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J. Nelson, 1939 open champion, was too down through the eleventh hole and finally caught Walsh only by shooting a birdie on the seventeenth.

Dick Metz of Chicago, the medalist, continued to shoot the best golf of the meeting as he beat John Thoren of Auburndale, Mass., three and two, and Ky Laffoon of Chicago by the same score. For sixty-eight holes up to this point Metz was twelve strokes under par over a long, water logged course.

Picard continued to warn the boys that he means to hang on to his title. He waltzed through two matches today and was eight under par for sixty-five holes, closest approach to Metz's pattern.

Dudley Shoots Ace

The morning round produced a hole in one by Ed Dudley, Philadelphia star who sank his 212-yard tee shot on the fifth hole against Henry Bontempo of Springfield, Mass., it netted him $100 from a sporting goods firm and helped him trim Bontempo, five and four.

Others who remained in the running were Sam Snead, Jimmy Hines, Paul Runyan, Art Cuerk, of Uniontown, Pa.; Ben Hogan and Al Brosch, of Farmingdale, N. Y.

Tomorrow's matches starting at 8:30 (EST) pit in this order: Picard vs Sarazen; Hines vs Snead; Dudley vs Runyan; Hagen vs McSpaden; Metz vs Nelson; Clark vs Kirk; Brosch and Guldahl vs Foulis.

Denny Schute, the former P.G.A. champion who was operated upon for appendicitis last night, was reported doing all right. The P.G.A. sent him a check for $250. He won $100 of it by qualifying yesterday.

Sisk Paces Hitters On Evangelical Ten

Evangelical softballers of the South Cumberland Sunday School Softball League are being paced in batting by Mason Sisk, who in 121 trips to the plate has banged out 54 hits for a .446 average.

J. Miller with .437 for 112 appearance, is second while Teets with .416 for 96 attempts, is third. All but one member of the squad is hitting over .300 with the team's average .364. The batting records follow:

Indians Lead The League Despite The Dirty Looks

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 — The Cleveland ball club goes its way, with everybody hating everybody else and nobody speaking to the manager except his relatives, and still the Indians lead the American League, with as good a chance to win the pennant as any other team.

Of course, there are certain philosophers, including James Dykes, of Chicago, who hold that the cancer will take its toll before the end of the season.

"When they come down the stretch and play those final games with Detroit and the other Western clubs," predicts Mr. Dykes, "the heat will be on, and there's no substitute under pressure for team play and hustle. There's trouble on that club, and the rest of us will pick away at it. After all, it's our business to win, and if Cleveland has a weakness, we'll play to it."

Cleveland has trouble, all right. Ever since the majority of her regular players went to their employer, Alva Bradley, and asked him to fire Manager Oscar Vitt, interlocking feuds and hatreds have bloomed like skunk cabbage. Bradley's lukewarm, let's-pretend-not-to-notice-it attitude has done nothing to mend the breach.

Not on Speaking Terms

Mr. Harold Trosky, the large first baseman, and Mr. Ralston Hemsley, the temperance crusader, do not speak to Mr. Vitt, and Mr. Vitt does not speak to them. Mr. Robin Feller, the mad dog of the highway, frankly views Mr. Vitt as an impediment to his progress, and Mr. Vitt no longer dangles Robin on his knee.

Some of the younger players think Mr. Trosky and Mr. Feller are full of hop, and they take no pains to conceal it. All in all, it is quite the reverse of a Rotary picnic. A neutral observer cannot pass the Cleveland bench without suffering flesh wounds from the dirty looks flying back and forth.

This makes it hard to understand why Cleveland has played better ball than ever since the bad feeling broke loose, but the case is by no means unique in baseball history. Another team—a great team—won the American League pennant once in an atmosphere of pure and unstifled ill-will that makes the Cleveland team resemble a reunion of the class of '05.

Mr. James Dykes believes it is next to impossible to win without team co-operation and the old Frank Merriwell oomph. Manager of the White Sox himself, Mr. Dykes has forgotten the White (or Black) Sox of 1919.

Riddled With Hatred

I have it on the authority of Edward Throwbridge Collins, second baseman of the 1919 Chicago team, that no ball club in history was so pockmarked with feuds and riddled with good, clean internecine hatred. The cold silence that prevailed on the bench between teammate and teammate was interrupted from time to time when someone thought of a new and dirtier crack to make about someone else. Otherwise, the boys did not speak at all.

Mr. Chick Gandil, the first baseman, did not speak to Mr. Collins, the second baseman, though they played side by side all year and performed with great brilliance and technical harmony. Mr. Buck Weaver, the third baseman, did not speak to Mr. Ray Schalk, the catcher, and Mr. Schalk did not speak to any of the pitchers except Mr. Dick Kerr and Mr. Red Faber. Three infielders, two outfielders, and a couple of pitchers pretended at all times not to notice Mr. Kid Gleason, the manager, and Mr. Gleason had no use at all, personally, for some of his finest athletes.

Yet the White Sox won the pennant off by themselves that year, and would have won the World Series in a single gulp if they had not decided to dicker with Abe Attell and his gambling associates.

Another minor instance of friction which did not interfere with results was the fine corsican loathing Joe Tinker had for Johnny Evers, and vice versa, when these two gentlemen constituted one of the great second-base combinations of all time with the Chicago Cubs. They hated each other, and their rivalry on the field led to one tremendous play after another.

The Indians of 1940, therefore, may still get away with it. They have a couple of classic precedents in their favor. But if they do, James Dykes will swear there is no justice in the world, and will very likely decide to start hating his own players from the sound of the bell next year.

Commercial Bowling League Will Hold Organization Meeting

Leo Leasure, president of the Commercial Bowling League has announced that a meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Savoy to organize for the 1940-41 season.

Last sason the league operated with six clubs but Leasure said enough applications have been received to assure an eight or ten-team circuit for the coming season.

White Sox Beat Boston 3 to 2 In Hurling Duel

Dietrich Wins over Fleming in Sparkling Display of Elbowing

BOSTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—The second division Chicago White Sox crept to within one game of the fourth place Boston Red Sox today, capturing the opener of a two-game series 3 to 2 as Bill Dietrich triumphed over Rookie Bill Fleming in a sparkling pitching duel.

Each team collected five hits and Fleming, the Pacific Coast League strikeout king, gave up but three in the seven innings he worked. Joe Heving, who relieved after Fleming gave way to a pinch hitter, surrendered the other pair.

Fleming yielded all his hits in the second when Luke Appling and Taft Wright singled. Mike Tresh was passed to fill the bases and set the stage for Dietrich to drive Appling and Wright home with a sharp single.

Boston tied up the game with a two-run rally in the seventh.

Edward Gallagher Famed Wrestling Coach at Oklahoma A and M Dies

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 28. (AP)—Edwrd Clark Gallagher, 53-year-old wrestling coach who brought world fame to Oklahoma A. and M. college, lost his bout with pneumonia today.

The little Irishman, known as the "Knute Rockne of the mat," was stricken on his return from a mountain vacation in Colorado.

Although Gallagher himself was not a wrestler, his Oklahoma Aggies dominated the amateur wrestling field for a quarter of a century, winning 11 of the 13 National Intercollegiate tournaments held during that time.

His death came at a time when his teams had completed three consecutive undefeated seasons—with an unbroken string of 25 dual meet victories—and won four successive national crowns.

The scientific system he devised, based on the principles of leverage, will go on—taught by the hundreds of coaches who learned their lessons under him.

Giants Beat Cards 5 to 2 on Homers

Go into Tie for Third as Warneke Loses after Eight Wins

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 28 (AP) — The New York Giants climbed up into a tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for third place in the National League today by whipping the Cards 5 to 2.

The defeat ended Lon Warneke's string of eight straight hurling victories.

A home run by Jojo Moore with one mate aboard in the third inning and another four-bagger, by Tony Cuccinello in the ninth proved the Giants' margin of victory. The other runs were scored in the sixth on Frank Demaree's double, Babe Young's triple and a passed ball.

Ali Ghan Gun Club To Shoot Today

The Cumberland Ali Ghan Gun Club will hold its weekly shoot this afternoon at 2:30 at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club traps. There will be both trap and skeet shooting.

Spadaccini Is Recovering

CLEVELAND, Aug. 28—Vic Spadaccini, the Cleveland Rams' brilliant blocking quarterback, is recovering from a painful elbow injury, suffered in scrimmage. It was believed that Spadaccini's elbow was fractured, but X-rays failed to reveal it and the star blocker is expected to be ready to play in Cleveland's opening National Football League game with the Philadelphia Eagles here Sunday, Sept. 22.

Angott and Zivic All Set for Bout Tonight in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28 (AP) — Sammy Angott, the N.B.A. lightweight champion and Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh welterweight, both reported ready tonight for their 12-round bout at Forbes Field tomorrow night.

An interested spectator will be Henry Armstrong, the welterweight champion, who has signed to meet the winner here next month with the Pittsburgh Dapper Dan Club's charities sharing in the promotion.

Promoters expect between 15,000 and 20,000 fans to attend tomorrow's fight, which was postponed from Monday. Interest has been heightened by the demand of Charley Jones, Angott's manager, that the referee be instructed to declare a foul and give Angott the round every time Zivic holds with one hand and strikes with the other.

"Zivic has won most of his fights by these tactics," Jones charged.

Zivic, in turn has threatened to waive a $50 forfeit and enter the ring above the stipulated 145 pounds to give him more than ten pounds weight advantage over the tough champ from Washington, Pa., and Louisville, Ky.

Moroz is larger than Primo C nera or Jess Willard.

Packers and All-Stars Will Play Tonight

85,000 Fans Are Expected To See Annual Contest

Game May Produce One of Most Spectacular Battles of Series

By EARL HILLIGAN

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, world professional football champions, will be out to salve a rankling, three year old gridiron sore tomorrow night at Soldier Field.

Before a throng which may hit the 85,000 mark—and constitute a record for the series—the Packers will meet the College All Stars in the seventh Pro-All Stars spectacle. And the Green Bay club, holder of more National Pro League titles than any other team in that tough circuit, will have a double barreled reason for wanting to win.

The Packers' No. 1 incentive undoubtedly will be the 6 to 0 licking they took in 1937 from the All Stars.

Series Is Tied

Secondly, the Packers must win tomorrow night or see the All Stars take a lead in the series started in 1933. Each side now has won twice. The Chicago Bears were victorious in 1935 and the New York Giants won last fall, with the All Stars taking the 1937 and 1938 games. The 1934 and 1936 contests were ties.

The game, should the turf by dry and fast, may produce one of the most spectacular battles of the series. Green Bay has one of the all time great passing combinations, with Arnie Herber tossing to Don Hutson and Cecil Isbell. With the collegians also having such accurate flingers as Nile Kinnick, Hen Heinemen and Kenny Washington, the fans may be treated to a display of brilliant aerial warfare.

Final Drills Held

Coach Curley Lambeau will not announce a starting lineup until the kickoff, scheduled for 8:20 p. m. (Chicago daylight time), but his opening backfield likely will consist of Larry Craig at blocking back, Arnie Herber and Cecil Isbell at the halfbacks and Clark Hinkle at fullback.

The All Star starting backfield will be Amby Schindler, quarterback, Kinnick and Lou Brock at the halves and Joe Thesing at fullback.

The Packers, forty-three strong, came to town today and headed for a night workout at Soldier Field. The All-Stars held a blackboard session this morning, then went through a final signal drill during the afternoon.

Boston Bees Beat Chicago Cubs 8-3

Clout 15 Hits off Delivery of Three Enemy Hurlers

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (AP)—A 15-hit rampage at the expense of three Chicago Cub pitchers gave the Boston Bees an 8 to 3 victory today in the first of a two-game series.

Dick Errickson, Bee hurler, helped with two doubles that drove in three runs. It was his tenth victory and came rather handily despite a two-run first inning outburst by the Cubs. After that he permitted just six runs. An error helped the Cubs to their final score, in the fourth.

Meantime, the Bees drove Larry French from the box in the second inning as they scored three runs and continued to peck away at French's successors—Charley Root and Clay Bryant.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—If the ducks had more sense they'd write to their congressmen about it but being ducks they probably don't even see the injustice in the fact that because there are about twenty-five per cent more of them this year the hunters are going to get about thirty-three per cent more time to shoot them.

"The biggest crop in ten years," is the way Ray Benson, executive secretary of Ducks Unlimited, views the outlok. "Last year there were about 65,000,000. This year we expect upwards of 80,000,000, despite the fact that for a time early in the year the outlook was bad.

"There wasn't any snow in parts of the Canadian breeding areas until mid-February, and that country relies on melting snow to fill the potholes and sloughs.

"As luck would have it, in June the rains came in abdormal quantity, and the same was true in July. That break, combined with the fact that our campaign against crows and magpies, which raid the nests, has shown results, has assured a bumper crop.

"The only thing we have to worry about now is duck sickness, or botulism. They get a stomach ache and die. It's something like ptomaine poisoning, and the toxin given off by one of these dead ducks can kill 2,000 others. However, that's a minor worry, except to the ducks. We've had one report of an outbreak on Lake Winnipeg, Manitoba, where 6,000 dead ducks were counted to the mile."

The hunters are a minor worry in the life of a duck, Benson says. A survey has shown that seventy per cent of an annual crop is lost before a gun is fired.

"Leading the list of hazards is drought," he explains. "Then come the crows and magpies, which account for about thirty per cent of the eggs. Then, and you'll be surprised, come the Northern Pike, called Jackfish up yonder. These submarine crows destroyed thirty-four per cent of the hatch in one delta. Prairie and marsh fires take their toll, and also duck sickness."

Ducks Unlimited is a non-profit organization established to insure the perpetuation of water fowl. If these underslung pigeons didn't know enough to protect themselves, somebody must do it for them.

This Ducks Unlimited has done by establishing breeding grounds providing feed during tough winters, fighting the natural enemies of the birds, and by other means.

This year, for the first time since 1933, a two-month hunting season has been proclaimed, opening October 1 in nine border states. Just wait until the ducks hear about that time extension. They'll picket the place.

LaSalle Athletic Group To Hear Coach Conway At Meeting Friday Night

The LaSalle Athletic Association will have a "most important" meeting Friday night at 8 o'clock at Carroll Hall, Brother Eugene, faculty director of athletics announced yesterday.

Patrick J. "Pat" Conway, LaSalle High coach will address the association and a discussion of the 1940 football season plans will feature the session.

Brother Dacian Stephen, LaSalle principal, and W. Arnold "Doc" Gunther, president of the association, will make short talks.

The meeting Friday will mark Conway's first appearance before the association which was founded just after he left here to accept a coaching job at West Philadelphia Catholic High.

BLENDED 33 TIMES TO MAKE ONE GREAT BEER!

BLUE RIBBON is a blend of 33 separate brews—for smoothness, for flavor, for goodness that's always the same!

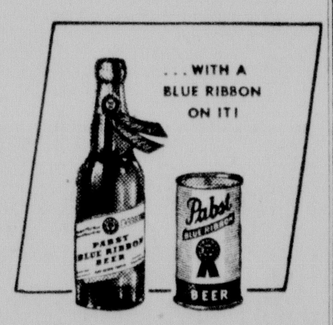
It takes not one, not five, not ten . . . but 33 separate brews, from 33 separate kettles, to make a single glass of BLUE RIBBON.

Each brew is as fine as choicest ingredients and Pabst's 96 years of experience can make it. Then all 33 are brought together in perfect balance.

It's like blending champagne, coffee or tobacco to produce the finest. An expensive way to brew? Of course. But that's what makes Blue Ribbon America's premium beer, with a smoothness that is unique . . . and a goodness that is always the same.



It's the BLEND that Betters the Beer

Packers and All-Stars Will Play Tonight

85,000 Fans Are Expected To See Annual Contest

Game May Produce One of Most Spectacular Battles of Series

By EARL HILLIGAN

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, world professional football champions, will be out to salve a rankling, three year old gridiron sore tomorrow night at Soldier Field.

Before a throng which may hit the 85,000 mark—and constitute a record for the series—the Packers will meet the College All Stars in the seventh Pro-All Stars spectacle. And the Green Bay club, holder of more National Pro League titles than any other team in that tough circuit, will have a double barreled reason for wanting to win.

The Packers' No. 1 incentive undoubtedly will be the 6 to 0 licking they took in 1937 from the All Stars.

Series Is Tied

Secondly, the Packers must win tomorrow night or see the All Stars take a lead in the series started in 1933. Each side now has won twice. The Chicago Bears were victorious in 1935 and the New York Giants won last fall, with the All Stars taking the 1937 and 1938 games. The 1934 and 1936 contests were ties.

The game, should the turf by dry and fast, may produce one of the most spectacular battles of the series. Green Bay has one of the all time great passing combinations, with Arnie Herber tossing to Don Hutson and Cecil Isbell. With the collegians also having such accurate flingers as Nile Kinnick, Hen Heinemen and Kenny Washington, the fans may be treated to a display of brilliant aerial warfare.

Final Drills Held

Coach Curley Lambeau will not announce a starting lineup until the kickoff, scheduled for 8:20 p. m. (Chicago daylight time), but his opening backfield likely will consist of Larry Craig at blocking back, Arnie Herber and Cecil Isbell at the halfbacks and Clark Hinkle at fullback.

The All Star starting backfield will be Amby Schindler, quarterback, Kinnick and Lou Brock at the halves and Joe Thesing at fullback.

The Packers, forty-three strong, came to town today and headed for a night workout at Soldier Field. The All-Stars held a blackboard session this morning, then went through a final signal drill during the afternoon.

Boston Bees Beat Chicago Cubs 8-3

Clout 15 Hits off Delivery of Three Enemy Hurlers

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (AP)—A 15-hit rampage at the expense of three Chicago Cub pitchers gave the Boston Bees an 8 to 3 victory today in the first of a two-game series.

Dick Errickson, Bee hurler, helped with two doubles that drove in three runs. It was his tenth victory and came rather handily despite a two-run first inning outburst by the Cubs. After that he permitted just six runs. An error helped the Cubs to their final score, in the fourth.

Meantime, the Bees drove Larry French from the box in the second inning as they scored three runs and continued to peck away at French's successors—Charley Root and Clay Bryant.

BLENDED 33 TIMES TO MAKE ONE GREAT BEER!

BLUE RIBBON is a blend of 33 separate brews—for smoothness, for flavor, for goodness that's always the same!

It must be good to be First in Hospitality — the most popular beer in the homes of America.

And one reason is — 33 Blends! Something you enjoy in no other beer.

It takes not one, not five, not ten ... but 33 separate brews, from 33 separate kettles, to make a single glass of BLUE RIBBON.

Each brew is as fine as choicest ingredients and Pabst's 96 years of experience can make it. Then all 33 are brought together in perfect balance.

It's like blending champagne, coffee or tobacco to produce the finest. An expensive way to brew? Of course. But that's what makes Blue Ribbon America's premium beer, with a smoothness that is unique ... and a goodness that is always the same.

It's the BLEND that Betters the Beer

Try Pabst Blue Ribbon and Prove it

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—If the ducks had more sense they'd write to their congressmen about it, but being ducks they probably don't even see the injustice in the fact that because there are about twenty-five per cent more of them this year the hunters are going to get about thirty-three per cent more time to shoot them.

"The biggest crop in ten years," is the way Ray Benson, executive secretary of Ducks Unlimited, views the outlok. "Last year there were about 65,000,000. This year we expect upwards of 80,000,000, despite the fact that for a time early in the year the outlook was bad.

"There wasn't any snow in parts of the Canadian breeding areas until mid-February, and that country relies on melting snow to fill the potholes and sloughs.

"As luck would have it, in June the rains came in abdormal quantity, and the same was true in July. That break, combined with the fact that our campaign against crows and magpies, which raid the nests, has shown results, has assured a bumper crop.

"The only thing we have to worry about now is duck sickness, or botulism. They get a stomach ache and die. It's something like ptomaine poisoning, and the toxin given off by one of these dead ducks can kill 2,000 others. However, that's a minor worry, except to the ducks. We've had one report of an outbreak on Lake Winnipeg, Manitoba, where 6,000 dead ducks were counted to the mile."

The hunters are a minor worry in the life of a duck, Benson says. A survey has shown that seventy per cent of an annual crop is lost before a gun is fired.

"Leading the list of hazards is drought," he explains. "Then come the crows and magpies, which account for about thirty per cent of the eggs. Then, and you'll be surprised, come the Northern Pike, called Jackfish up yonder. These submarine crows destroyed thirty-four per cent of the hatch in one delta. Prairie and marsh fires take their toll, and also duck sickness."

Ducks Unlimited is a non-profit organization established to insure the perpetuation of water fowl. If these underslung pigeons didn't know enough to protect themselves, somebody must do it for them.

This Ducks Unlimited has done by establishing breeding grounds providing feed during tough winters, fighting the natural enemies of the birds, and by other means.

This year, for the first time since 1932, a two-month hunting season has been proclaimed, opening October 1 in nine border states. Just wait until the ducks hear about that time extension. They'll picket the place.

LaSalle Athletic Group To Hear Coach Conway At Meeting Friday Night

The LaSalle Athletic Association will have a "most important" meeting Friday night at 8 o'clock at Carroll Hall, Brother Eugene, faculty director of athletics announced yesterday.

Patrick J. "Pat" Conway, LaSalle High coach will address the association and a discussion of the 1940 football season plans will feature the session.

Brother Dacian Stephen, LaSalle principal, and W. Arnold "Doc" Gunther, president of the association, will make short talks.

The meeting Friday will mark Conway's first appearance before the association which was founded just after he left here to accept a coaching job at West Philadelphia Catholic High.

DICK TRACY—Ready for Discard

Chamber Starts Study of Traffic Situation Here

Committee Will Try To Relieve Downtown Traffic Snarls

Car-driving Christians who not infrequently make irreverent remarks about traffic congestion in downtown Cumberland will doubtless be pleased to hear that the chamber of commerce has started to interest itself in their problem.

A traffic flow check has been completed, information on the problem being gathered and a traffic committee appointed to make a thorough study of the situation.

Members of the committee who will start work soon are C. A. Piper, chairman, William A. Douglas, Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman, Police Commissioner James Orr, Perry Nicklin, John F. Rodman, Jr., F. H. Rockwell, George Schwarzenbach, and W. Donald Smith.

Through Traffic No Factor

One interesting point was brought to light in the traffic flow check made by the General Outdoor Advertising Agency. This is the fact that most of Cumberland's traffic originates within twenty-five miles of the community center and that through traffic is a very small factor.

Consequently, it is sensible to conclude that by-passes to accommodate through traffic do not necessarily greatly relieve traffic density in downtown areas, H. W. Smith, secretary of the chamber of commerce, said yesterday.

Two Remedies Suggested

Asked what would be the logical answer, Smith said there were two.

The first would be to widen the traffic lanes.

The second, and probably the best, would be the construction of beltline distribution lanes, or 'periferals' as they are sometimes called, he said. These lanes, offshoots from the main arteries of travel, would eliminate the necessity of all traffic bolting through one or two main streets in the downtown area. In other words, the beltline distribution lanes would enable cars to go around the more congested sections rather than through them.

City Traffic Heavy

Proof of the traffic density in Cumberland was shown by the statistical information revealed by the check.

It was found that 647 cars pass at 65 North Centre street, corner of Frederick, every hour.

The average flow at 183 Baltimore street from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. is 590 cars per hour.

The check at 401 Greene street, corner of Chase, showed that between 165 and 185 cars pass hourly in the morning and an average of 500 hourly in the afternoon.

Average hourly flow on U. S. Route 40 west at the junction of the Mt. Savage road was between 188 and 200 cars. The flow at Lindnerville on Route 40 was between 105 and 110 each hour.

Smith said the newly appointed committee would meet as soon as necessary statistical data and information is received from a number of sources including the United States Bureau of Public Roads, the traffic department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Baltimore Association of Commerce where a survey is to be made in twenty-five representative cities, and the National Safety Council.

City Officials Interested

The chamber secretary said Police Commissioner Orr and Chief Eyerman had both expressed great interest in the work to be undertaken and are hopeful that a program can be worked out to relieve traffic congestion in downtown Cumberland.

The chamber is hopeful that the day will dawn when drivers of highly explosive temperament who vex easily will be able to negotiate the entire downtown area on a Saturday night without so much as saying "damn."

Loyal Order of Moose Has Corn Roast

Members of Cumberland Lodge No. 271, Loyal Order of Moose, last night feted at a corn roast held at the lodge's home on Beall street. Approximately 250 attended.

Music, under the direction of Prof. A. R. Serf, was furnished by the Moose band.

Sunday, the band will leave via train for Baltimore where they will present a concert in the afternoon. Monday, it will participate in the Labor Day parade at Moorefield, W. Va.

Two Drivers Arrested For Careless Driving

Charges of careless driving were placed against two drivers last night, following a minor traffic accident at Central and Baltimore avenues.

Two drivers, Francis C. Davis, of Central YMCA, and Eugene Carder, 717½ Virginia avenue, were summoned to appear tomorrow in police court for a hearing.

Officers James J. Condon and James E. Kelley investigated.

Personal Items

Doris Ann Lilya, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Lillya, 539 Fairview acenue, underwent a tonsillectomy yesterday at Allegany hospital. She was able to return home.

Dr. and Mrs. G. X. Berry and daughter, Ruth, Park Heights, have returned from Michigan and Canada.

Miss Ola Trump, of Columbus, Ohio, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Mowen, 865 Gephart Drive.

Seventy-four-year-old Cumberland Man Becomes Father

It's most uncommon for men to become fathers after passing the allotted span of three score and ten years, but seventy-four-year-old Charles H. Grubb, of 727 Bedford street, is an exception.

Four days ago, a daughter was born at Memorial hospital to Mr. Grubb and his thirty-eight-year-old wife, Verlinda A. Grub.

In May 1939 the Grubbs' first child, Cathleen Edna, was born and Mr. Grubb had the unusual distinction of becoming a father for the first time at the age of seventy-three.

Mr. Grubb, who is a retired lumberman and grocer, has been married three times.

Student's Needs Considered First In Midland Case

Better Education at Minimum Cost Prompted Transfer, Says Kopp

The desire to furnish children of the community with a better education at a minimum cost prompted the board of education to merge the Midland School junior high department with that of Beall high school, Frostburg, School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp announced yesterday.

The superintendent said it is the responsibility of education officials to provide the "best education at the least cost."

Mr. Kopp stated that the best thinking in educational administration finds where a teacher has only one grade and not several, better results are obtained.

It is the state policy to encourage consolidation and the county is in agreement, the superintendent said. It is not economically sound to improve facilities at Midland and other small schools to an extent where complete courses can be offered, he said.

Mr. Kopp said a committee from Midland called upon him to ask that a high school be started there but after the advantages of sending the junior high students to Frostburg were explained, the committee expressed approval of the board's policy. The superintendent said the board has agreed to provide a waiting room for those who will travel to Frostburg by bus.

Mr. Kopp said a committee from Gilmore also complained about the consolidation but after hearing the reasons were completely satisfied.

The financial statement for the year ending July 31, 1939, shows the average cost per pupil at Midland for grades seven and eight was $85.38, the highest in the county. The county average was $60.42.

For grade nine the average cost at Midland was $93.92, again the highest in the county, as compared to a county average of $61.84.

WPA To Improve Frederick Street

Decision To Start Project Monday Is Reached at Conference

Work of improving Frederick street extended to the city line with curbs, gutters, sidewalks and blacktop will be started Monday as a city-sponsored WPA project, it was decided yesterday at a conference at city hall between Mayor Harry Irvine, F. W. Springer, of Frederick, district manager of WPA and Henry Tarring, Jr., resident engineer for WPA.

Twenty workers will be placed on the project at the start and the force is expected to be increased to fifty or sixty after the job gets well under way.

Mayor Irvine said that the State Roads Commission will improve the road from the city line to Nave's crossroads.

The improved road will relieve some of the heavy traffic now being carried by the Bedford road.

Another section of the city sidewalks project will probably be started next week, Mr. Tarring said. At the present time sidewalks are being laid on Camden avenue and two crews will be put on that project next week.

Beetle Traps Here Are Doing Fine Job

Over 85,000 Japanese beetles have been snared in beetle traps in this area this summer, County Agent R. F. McHenry said yesterday.

While the war on the beetle infestation of the county has been proceeding well the truth is that there are twice as many beetles this year as last.

Some 37,000 of the bugs were caught in the yellow beetle traps placed throughout this area last year. Twice as many have been captured this year.

The major infestation this year is in South Cumberland with the West side ranking next. A few beetles were captured in Frostburg, Mt. Savage and McCoole.

Traps set out in Lonaconing, Oldtown and Flintstone this year captured not a single bug, proof McHenry thinks that the pest is ranging principally in populous areas.

COSTLY CRIBBING COLLAPSES—Heavy rains early Sunday morning caused cribbing which serves as a retaining wall on Niagara street to collapse, sending tons of shale and earth down the steep embankment. The city immediately ordered the street closed to vehicular traffic because it is impossible to tell when more earth will slide over the hill. A year ago the wall, consisting of concrete blocks reinforced with steel, was built at a cost of $8,000. The above photo shows a section of the wall which has moved out of line as a result of the earth sliding and forcing the cribbing on both sides to collapse. A representative of an out-of-town firm which furnished the city the cribbing for the wall is expected to confer with City Engineer Rizer today.

Mrs. Clara Watson Dies at Her Home

Long Illness Is Fatal to Resident of Piney Grove Section

Mrs. Clara Watson, 64, wife of E. J. Watson, died Tuesday at her home in the Piney Grove section, twenty-five miles east of Cumberland, following a long illness.

Mrs. Watson was a daughter of the late Henry and Margaret Mann. She was a teacher in the Piney Grove Methodist Sunday school and president of the Ladies Aid Society.

Surviving, besides her husband, are two sons, John D. Watson, of the Piney Grove-Little Orleans section, and Floyd E. Watson, of Hancock; a daughter, Mrs. Thelma Eyler, og Akron, Ohio; four brothers, E. A. Mann, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Garfield Mann, of Harmony, Pa.; George Mann, of Hagerstown, and T. T. Mann, of Little Orleans; a sister, Mrs. Annie Brinkman, of Lyons, N. Y., and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Byrne Succumbs

Word has been received by Mrs. A. J. Chorpenning, 29 North Lee street, of the death of her niece, Mrs. Lawrence Byrne, 49, of Lancaster, Ohio.

Mrs. Byrne was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Decker, of Fairmont, W. Va., formerly of Cumberland.

Funeral services will be held today in Lancaster.

Charles Stein Dies

George W. Stein, 605 North Mechanic street, was advised of the death of his brother, Charles Stein, 3110 Rolla Place, St. Louis, Mo.

He was a brother of the late Louis Stein. His wife survives.

W. J. Cubbage Is Taken to Hospital

William J. Cubbage, 57, a member of the Cumberland Police Department, who was taken suddenly ill early Monday morning at his home, 629 Lincoln street, was admitted to Memorial hospital last night.

Relatives said the attending physician told them that a small blood vessel on the right side of his head had burst. He was admitted to the hospital for observation, they said.

Hospital attendants reported Mr. Cubbage's condition as "fair" late last night.

Alton Haddock Sent To Jail for Five Days

Alton Haddock, of Granville, N. C., was sentenced to five days in jail yesterday in trial magistrates court when he was unable to pay $5 and costs for driving without a license in his possession.

Haddock was arrested on the National highway at LaVale by State Trooper George J. Miller.

Town Hall Players Name Rosamond Stage and Production Manager

Robert Rosamond, 521 Cumberland street, has been named stage and production director of the Town Hall Players for the 1940-41 season, according to announcement made by William Kight last night at the regular meeting of the Players in The Barn.

The selection of Rosamond met with unanimous approval of the Players, and he was given a vote of confidence and extended a pledge of cooperation by the entire membership.

Mr. Rosamond has been a familiar figure in amateur dramatics for the past fifteen years in Cumberland and has appeared in numerous productions with the Players and other civic, cultural and scholastic groups. During his career in the amateur theater, he has assisted in staging a number of shows and has served in practically every capacity in connection with promotion, production and presentation of theater art.

The Players made preliminary plans for their annual ticket sale and subscription campaign. Two groups were organized with Mrs. Samuel Jacobson and Mrs. Jack Moore as captains. The campaign is in charge of F. Allan Weatherholt, who stated tickets will go on sale for the season next Wednesday, when the first regular meeting of the new season will be held at the Barn.

A group of fifteen plays was suggested by Mrs. Moore, chairman of the play committee. Of this group five will be selevted for presentation this season.

James Shaw was named stage and property manager and Bert Ways was named stage electrician for the season.

The Players decided to continue their series of weekly radio dramas throughout the fall and winter months. These are directed by George Russell and the next will be offered September 8.

Scout Color Guards Invited to Tomato Festival Parade

Color guards of troops of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, have been invited to participate in the massing of the colors to be held in conjunction with the parade featuring the Fourth Annual Tomato Festival, Labor day, Monday, September 2, in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Raymond C. Lalor, scout executive, announces.

The massed color guard will embrace troops of the Shenandoah area, Washington county and Potomac council.

Each color guard composed of four boys will carry an American flag and the troop flag.

Those desiring to participate are requested to report to Herbert Shelly, chairman of the Tomato Festival Parade committee at 1:30 p. m. Monday. The parade is scheduled to start at 2 p. m. Each troop of Potomac Council planning to participate is requested to notify scout headquarters in Cumberland.

The State Publicity Commission of Maryland recently placed on the market the colorful "Come to Maryland, America in Miniature" stamp series.

Consisting of twenty - five poster stamps, the series depicts the outstanding recreational, historic and scenic points of interest in the state.

Vividly illustrated are famous landmarks such as the homes of Governor William Paca and Charles Carroll of Carrollton, signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Then too, there is a stamp picturing Barbara Fritchie house, and other stamps showing replicas of famous buildings, such as that of General Smallwood's home, the original state house, and famous Fort Cumberland.

Such interesting buildings as Washington college, the marine biological laboratory, and the state house, which is the oldest state house in America, were not overlooked when making up the series, for there is a stamp illustrating each of these too.

Poster stamps picturing the Great falls of the Potomac and Deep Creek lake, in Garrett county, famous for gorgeous mountain views, give the stamp collector a glimpse of the scenic wonders of the state, and other stamps illustrating the world's famous Susquehanna duck hunting flats; fox hunting, a traditional Maryland sport; world famous Marlin fishing grounds and steeplechase racing, give the collector an idea of the recreational attractions to be found in the state.

Other stamps represent the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Chesapeake bay, Fort McHenry, historic Antietam battlefield and many other places of interest.

These stamps, which measure approximately 1—¾ by 2—¼ inches, have all been reproduced from actual paintings by a distinguished artist and are printed in three colors, red, yellow and black.

The series can be secured from the Maryland Publicity Commission, State Office building, Annapolis.

Suffers Injuries

William Shumaker, 20, of 207 Davidson street, suffered abrasions about the arms and legs yesterday morning when he fell from a motorcycle on which he was riding.

He was treated at Allegany hospital and discharged

Weather Man Gives Indication Warm Days Are Ahead

Some hope for a pleasant Labor day weekend was held out by the weatehr man last night although the forecast for today is more rain and continued cold.

A letup in the rain in this section was predicted for tomorrow. Forecast for Saturday was generally fair with rising temperature.

With .54 of an inch of rain falling in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a. m. yesterday, the total for the last three days was brought to 3.69 inches. The total for the month is 5.81 inches or two inches above normal.

A light rain continued to fall in Cumberland early last night.

Potomac Council Announces Plans For This Fall

Hobnob Is Scheduled for October; Indoor Events Are Recommended

General plans for major activities as developed at an executive board meeting of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, call for a Scoutmaster's Hobnob October 12 or 13, recommendation that each district have some form of affair during the month of October and a recommendation that troops in every district look forward to Scout Anniversary Week, February 8 to 14, 1941.

Kenneth Beck has been appointed chairman of the Scoutmasters' Hobnob.

Each district is asked to have some form of affair such as a hike, rally of court of honor in October.

The executive board also recommended that each district conduct an idoor event which is to include two acts of the Scout Circus. The purpose of recommending acts is to give troops experience in this type of demonstration so as to pool their experience in the presentation of a Scout circus.

Plans for a Scout exposition in April also were discussed by the executive board.

District meetings for next month have been announced as follows: Deep Creek, Thursday, September 5, in Oakland; Tri-Towns, Friday, September 6, in Piedmont; Cumberland, Monday, September 9, at home of Miles F. Thompson, LaVale; New Creek, Tuesday, September 10, in Keyser; Frostburg, Thursday, September 12, in Frostburg.

The executive board of Potomac Council will hold its next meeting Thursday, September 19, at the home of W. J. Elvin, Frostburg.

42 Aliens Are Registered Here

Italians, English and Austrians Lead in Signing Up

Forty-two aliens have been registered here and fifty-two others have taken home the necessary forms to be filled out since the registration started, it was reported last night by Frank L. M. Storm who is in charge of the work.

Fourteen of the aliens registered are Italians while nine English and four Austrians have been tabulated. The others are from scattered points of the globe.

One Russian who applied yesterday spoke the English language fluently, but could not fill out the form because he neither reads nor writes English.

He explained that he came to this country when quite young and had worked hard all his life and never had the time to acquire the ability to read and write. The dilemma was solved when Samuel Barsky of North Mechanic street, this city, offered his services as "interpreter." Mr. Barsky, who speaks English, Polish and Russian told Mr. Storm he would assist in interpreting any time he was called upon.

Several naturalized citizens have come in and asked to have their fingerprints taken for the citizen's file at the F. B. I. office in Washington, D. C., but Mr. Storm explained that he could not undertake the job.

Two Mt. Savage Youths Are Held under Bond On Motor Theft Charge

Two Mt. Savage youths were committed to the county jail and ordered held under $500 bond each for action of the October grand jury when arraigned yesterday in trial magistrate's court on a charge of breaking and entering.

Francis S. Whorton, 17, and James A. Blank, 18, are accused of breaking into the garage of John F. Gallagher, of Mt. Savage, and stealing an automobile motor.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle said the youths admitted the charge.

A third youth, Gerald Blank, will be arraigned later on the same charge, according to authorities.

NAMED PRINCESS — Miss Betty Lee McIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl McIntyre, 623 Sedgewick street, this city, has been selected by Jack Hunter, director of the Berkeley Springs Tomato Festival, to serve in the court of Queen Morgan IV. She is a graduate of Allegany high school and will enter Maryland College for Women this fall. Miss McIntyre was one of the baton twirlers of the Allegany high school band.

License Ordinance Will Be Enforced, Trieber Declares

Those Who Do Not Apply Promptly Will Be Arrested, He Says

City police are conducting the most extensive drive in the history of the department to enforce the Cumberland license ordinance, according to Assistant Chief John J. Treiber.

Those who do not apply for licenses within twenty-four hours will be arrested and subject to fine, he said.

Officers on duty in the cruiser cars are making a place-to-place canvass to make sure no one escapes obtaining a license. All business places, regardless of size must have a license to operate.

"The day of coaxing business men to get licenses is past," Assistant Chief Treiber said. "From now on persons will comply with the ordinance or suffer the consequences."

A few of the places that must have licenses to operate are beauty parlors, restaurants, trucking firms, garages, theaters, all stores, shoe shine parlors and numerous others.

The old licenses expired about a month ago.

Virginia Avenue One-way Street Plan Is Opposed

Petitioners Claim Change Would Be Detrimental to Business

Merchants and property owners are opposed to the conversion of Virginia avenue into a one-way thoroughfare, according to the sentiment expressed in a petition which was forwarded yesterday by special messenger to Mayor Harry Irvine at city hall.

The petition containing the names of seventy-six persons declared that such a move would be detrimental to business in that section of the city and the change is unwarranted at this time.

Suggestion that Virginia avenue be made a one-way street was offered by Mayor Irvine at Monday's meeting of the council after City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer told the city fathers that sidewalks could be cut down and the street widened to relieve traffic congestion.

Irvine's plan is to make Virginia avenue one-way and have either Arch or Springdale street handle one-way traffic in the other direction. He opposed the cutting down of sidewalks because it would make them too narrow.

Mrs. Edith Pfeiffer Returns Home from Memorial Hospital

Miss Mary Moyer, 17, of 1313 Virginia avenue; Mrs. Mary L. Rummer, 29, of 927 Gay street, and Mrs. Anna Parker, 31, of 1031 Rolling Mill alley, who were injured Tuesday night in a four-car collision in the subway on Wineow street, were reported "improving" last night at Allegany hospital.

Mrs. Edith B. Pfeiffer, 36, of 755 Maryland avenue, who was believed to be the most seriously hurt, was released from Memorial hospital yesterday.

The drivers of the four cars involved were Robert E. Reger, 10 Thomas street; George W. Rummer, 927 Gay street; Charles A. Alkire, 3 Hay street, and Frederick A. Pfeiffer, 755 Maryland avenue. They were cited to appear Friday in trial magistrates court on charges of reckless driving.

Thirty-five Applicants Seek Marriage Licenses

Thirty-five applicants for marriage licenses, the majority of them from Pennsylvania, visited the marriage license bureau in the Clerk of Court's office yesterday. Twenty-one licenses were issued yesterday by Clerk Robert Jackson.

Children of Nine Playgrounds Give Colorful Pageant

District Officers of WPA Are Guests at Constitution Park

Talented youngsters from nine city and county Works Project Administration playgrounds gave a most creditable performance yesterday at Constitution park's amphitheater where they presented a colorful pageant entitled "Of All Nations". The pageant featured a basket picnic attended by three hundred persons, including district, city and county leaders.

The pageant in which 100 children took part started at 5 p. m. and lasted an hour.

Guests of honor included F. W. Springer, of Frederick, district manager of WPA; Henry Tarring, Jr., of LaVale, resident engineer; Miss Dorothy C. Worrilow, of Frederick, district director of professional and service projects and Mrs. Frances L. Dunlap, district supervisor of recreation.

Countries represented in the pageant presented on the large stage of the amphitheater which was decorated with American flags were Scotland, Ireland, China, France, Mexico, Holland, Spain, Hawaii and America.

"America", presented by the Pekin Playground, of which Mrs. Catherine Freeman and James Timney are leaders, was an outstanding number. Attired in Indian blankets and headdress, this group of eleven girls from Pekin, presented a real Indian war dance and songs and made a decided hit with the audience. Seven boy scouts of Barton acted as color guard.

Tap Dancer on Program

The South End Playground, which Mrs. Mary Yankee, Miss Jeannette Lapp and Berkeley Judy are leaders, presented a group of seven girls and four boys dressed in Irish costumes and their little act consisted of the singing of songs of the Emerald Isle. The Bergman Sisters, of 100 East First street, entertained with the selection "My Wild Irish Rose" on accordians and Miss Turner pleased with her tap dance.

The Westernport Playground group, directed by Miss Nellie Meese and Miss Geneva Hyde, wore Dutch costumes and presented the favorite dances and songs of Holland. This group of seven attractive girls included Gloria and Jean Nestor, who scored with their rendition of a "Little Dutch Garden" a vocal duet.

Other nations represented were Scotland by North End Playground, China, by thirteen boys and girls from East Side; Mexico, by five girls from Gephart playground; Spain, by three girls and three boys of Barton playground, and Hawaii, by seventeen girls from the Eckhart-Frostburg playground.

Patriotic Finale

As a grand finale to the program the entire group of 100 children sang "God Bless America", led by Miss Jeanette Lapp.

Music was provided by the "Cowboy Bandwagon," local radio entertainers. The trio consisted of "Happy Johnny" Chicarelli, "Cowboy Ray" Clark and William Drew. Special numbers included "Leaning on the Old Top Rail" by "Cowboy Ray", vocalist; "Going Up Cripple Creek", by "Happy Johnny", fiddle selection and "Hawaiian Lone" and "Hilo March", electric guitar selections by William Drew.

Cumberland costumes were furnished by the NYA sewing room under the supervision of Mrs. Theresa Coleman while those worn by Barton, Westernport, Pekin, Frostburg and Eckhart children were furnished by mother clubs in those towns.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cooper, county supervisor of recreation, directed the program.

Cumberlanders Will Get Opportunity To Enter Peabody Audition

An opportunity to enter a state audition at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, September 18, is offered any local boy or girl unable to continue their musical education without financial aid, according to Mrs. Henry C. Swearinger, 571 Patterson avenue, chairman for Western Maryland.

The audition may lead to a three-year scholarship in vocal and instrumental music.

Application blanks may be obtained until Saturday and must be in the hands of Mrs. Roland Whitehurst, president of the Maryland Federation of Music clubs, 465 West Ellet street, Philadelphia, not later than September 3.

Each application must be signed by a school principal or church pastor, certifying to the real need of the applicant for financial help.

Applicants must be native American citizens, under sixteen years of age as of September 1. Vocal and instrumental musicians are eligible.

A scholarship award amounting to $250 a year for three years to the boy or girl adjudged best after winners of state and district auditions have been heard in national competition, will be offered by the National Federation of Music clubs.

Those interested are advised to consult with Mrs. Swearinger or Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe, Grey Gables, Braddock road.

Chamber Starts Study of Traffic Situation Here

Committee Will Try To Relieve Downtown Traffic Snarls

Car-driving Christians who not infrequently make irreverent remarks about traffic congestion in downtown Cumberland will doubtless be pleased to hear that the chamber of commerce has started to interest itself in their problem.

A traffic flow check has been completed, information on the problem being gathered and a traffic committee appointed to make a thorough study of the situation.

Members of the committee who will start work soon are C. A. Piper, chairman, William A. Douglas, Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman, Police Commissioner James Orr, Perry Nicklin, John F. Rodman, Jr., F. H. Rockwell, George Schwarzenbach, and W. Donald Smith.

Through Traffic No Factor

One interesting point was brought to light in the traffic flow check made by the General Outdoor Advertising Agency. This is the fact that most of Cumberland's traffic originates within twenty-five miles of the community center and that through traffic is a very small factor.

Consequently, it is sensible to conclude that by-passes to accommodate through traffic do not necessarily greatly relieve traffic density in downtown areas, H. W. Smith, secretary of the chamber of commerce, said yesterday.

Two Remedies Suggested

Asked what would be the logical answer, Smith said there were two. The first would be to widen the traffic lanes.

The second, and probably the best, would be the construction of beltline distribution lanes, or 'periferals' as they are sometimes called, he said. These lanes, offshoots from the main arteries of travel, would eliminate the necessity of all traffic bolting through one or two main streets in the downtown area. In other words, the beltline distribution lanes would enable cars to go around the more congested sections rather than through them.

City Traffic Heavy

Proof of the traffic density in Cumberland was shown by the statistical information revealed by the check.

It was found that 647 cars pass at 65 North Centre street, corner of Frederick, every hour.

The average flow at 183 Baltimore street from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. is 590 cars per hour.

The check at 401 Greene street, corner of Chase, showed that between 165 and 185 cars pass hourly in the morning and an average of 500 hourly in the afternoon.

Average hourly flow on U. S. Route 40 west at the junction of the Mt. Savage road was between 188 and 200 cars. The flow at Lindnerville on Route 40 was between 105 and 110 each hour.

Smith said the newly appointed committee would meet as soon as necessary statistical data and information is received from a number of sources including the United States Bureau of Public Roads, the traffic department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Baltimore Association of Commerce where a survey is to be made in twenty-five representative cities, and the National Safety Council.

City Officials Interested

The chamber secretary said Police Commissioner Orr and Chief Eyerman had both expressed great interest in the work to be undertaken and are hopeful that a program can be worked out to relieve traffic congestion in downtown Cumberland.

The chamber is hopeful that the day will dawn when drivers of highly explosive temperament who vex easily will be able to negotiate the entire downtown area on a Saturday night without so much as saying "damn."

Loyal Order of Moose Has Corn Roast

Members of Cumberland Lodge No. 271, Loyal Order of Moose, last night feted at a corn roast held at the lodge's home on Beall street. Approximately 250 attended.

Music, under the direction of Prof. A. R. Serf, was furnished by the Moose band.

Sunday, the band will leave via train for Baltimore where they will present a concert in the afternoon. Monday, it will participate in the Labor Day parade at Moorefield, W. Va.

Two Drivers Arrested For Careless Driving

Charges of careless driving were placed against two drivers last night, following a minor traffic accident at Central and Baltimore avenues.

Two drivers, Francis C. Davis, of Central YMCA, and Eugene Carder, 717½ Virginia avenue, were summoned to appear tomorrow in police court for a hearing.

Officers James J. Condon and James E. Kelley investigated.

Seventy-four-year-old Cumberland Man Becomes Father

It's most uncommon for men to become fathers after passing the allotted span of three score and ten years, but seventy-four-year-old Charles H. Grubb, of 727 Bedford street, is an exception.

Four days ago, a daughter was born at Memorial hospital to Mr. Grubb and his thirty-eight-year-old wife, Verlinda A. Grub.

In May 1939 the Grubbs' first child, Cathleen Edna, was born and Mr. Grubb had the unusual distinction of becoming a father for the first time at the age of seventy-three.

Mr. Grubb, who is a retired lumberman and grocer, has been married three times.

Student's Needs Considered First In Midland Case

Better Education at Minimum Cost Prompted Transfer, Says Kopp

The desire to furnish children of the community with a better education at a minimum cost prompted the board of education to merge the Midland School junior high department with that of Beall high school, Frostburg, School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp announced yesterday.

The superintendent said it is the responsibility of education officials to provide the "best education at the least cost."

Mr. Kopp stated that the best thinking in educational administration finds where a teacher has only one grade and not several, better results are obtained.

It is the state policy to encourage consolidation and the county is in agreement, the superintendent said. It is not economically sound to improve facilities at Midland and other small schools to an extent where complete courses can be offered, he said.

Mr. Kopp said a committee from Midland called upon him to ask that a high school be started there but after the advantages of sending the junior high students to Frostburg were explained, the committee expressed approval of the board's policy. The superintendent said the board has agreed to provide a waiting room for those who will travel to Frostburg by bus.

Mr. Kopp said a committee from Gilmore also complained about the consolidation but after hearing the reasons were completely satisfied.

The financial statement for the year ending July 31, 1939, shows the average cost per pupil at Midland for grades seven and eight was $85.38, the highest in the county. The county average was $60.42.

For grade nine the average cost at Midland was $93.92, again the highest in the county, as compared to a county average of $61.84.

WPA To Improve Frederick Street

Decision To Start Project Monday Is Reached at Conference

Work of improving Frederick street extended to the city line with curbs, gutters, sidewalks and blacktop will be started Monday as a city-sponsored WPA project, it was decided yesterday at a conference at city hall between Mayor Harry Irvine, F. W. Springer, of Frederick, district manager of WPA and Henry Tarring, Jr., resident engineer for WPA.

Twenty workers will be placed on the project at the start and the force is expected to be increased to fifty or sixty after the job gets well under way.

Mayor Irvine said that the State Roads Commission will improve the road from the city line to Nave's crossroads.

The improved road will relieve some of the heavy traffic now being carried by the Bedford road.

Another section of the city sidewalks project will probably be started next week, Mr. Tarring said. At the present time sidewalks are being laid on Camden avenue and two crews will be put on that project next week.

Beetle Traps Here Are Doing Fine Job

Over 85,000 Japanese beetles have been snared in beetle traps in this area this summer, County Agent R. F. McHenry said yesterday.

While the war on the beetle infestation of the county has been proceeding well the truth is that there are twice as many beetles this year as last.

Some 37,000 of the bugs were caught in the yellow beetle traps placed throughout this area last year. Twice as many have been captured this year.

The major infestation this year is in South Cumberland with the West side ranking next. A few beetles were captured in Frostburg, Mt. Savage and McCoole.

Traps set out in Lonaconing, Oldtown and Flintstone this year captured not a single bug, proof McHenry thinks that the pest is ranging principally in populous areas.

COSTLY CRIBBING COLLAPSES—Heavy rains early Sunday morning caused cribbing which serves as a retaining wall on Niagara street to collapse, sending tons of shale and earth down the steep embankment. The city immediately ordered the street closed to vehicular traffic because it is impossible to tell when more earth will slide over the hill. A year ago the wall, consisting of concrete blocks reinforced with steel, was built at a cost of $8,000. The above photo shows a section of the wall which has moved out of line as a result of the earth sliding and forcing the cribbing on both sides to collapse. A representative of an out-of-town firm which furnished the city the cribbing for the wall is expected to confer with City Engineer Rizer today.

W. J. Cubbage Is Taken to Hospital

William J. Cubbage, 57, a member of the Cumberland Police Department, who was taken suddenly ill early Monday morning at his home, 629 Lincoln street, was admitted to Memorial hospital last night.

Relatives said the attending physician told them that a small blood vessel on the right side of his head had burst. He was admitted to the hospital for observation, they said.

Hospital attendants reported Mr. Cubbage's condition as "fair" late last night.

Alton Haddock Sent To Jail for Five Days

Alton Haddock, of Granville, N. C., was sentenced to five days in jail yesterday in trial magistrates court when he was unable to pay $5 and costs for driving without a license in his possession.

Haddock was arrested on the National highway at LaVale by State Trooper George J. Miller.

Town Hall Players Name Rosamond Stage and Production Manager

Robert Rosamond, 521 Cumberland street, has been named stage and production director of the Town Hall Players for the 1940-41 season, according to announcement made by William Kight last night at the regular meeting of the Players in The Barn.

The selection of Rosamond met with unanimous approval of the Players, and he was given a vote of confidence and extended a pledge of cooperation by the entire membership.

Mr. Rosamond has been a familiar figure in amateur dramatics for the past fifteen years in Cumberland and has appeared in numerous productions with the Players and other civic, cultural and scholastic groups. During his career in the amateur theater, he has assisted in staging a number of shows and has served in practically every capacity in connection with promotion, production and presentation of theater art.

The Players made preliminary plans for their annual ticket sale and subscription campaign. Two groups were organized with Mrs. Samuel Jacobson and Mrs. Jack Moore as captains. The campaign is in charge of F. Allan Weatherholt, who stated tickets will go on sale for the season next Wednesday, when the first regular meeting of the new season will be held at the Barn.

A group of fifteen plays was suggested by Mrs. Moore, chairman of the play committee. Of this group five will be selevted for presentation this season.

James Shaw was named stage and property manager and Bert Ways was named stage electrician for the season.

The Players decided to continue their series of weekly radio dramas throughout the fall and winter months. These are directed by George Russell and the next will be offered September 8.

The State Publicity Commission of Maryland recently placed on the market the colorful "Come to Maryland, America in Miniature" stamp series.

Consisting of twenty - five poster stamps, the series depicts the outstanding recreational, historic and scenic points of interest in the state.

Vividly illustrated are famous landmarks such as the homes of Governor William Paca and Charles Carroll of Carrollton, signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Then too, there is a stamp picturing Barbara Fritchie house, and other stamps showing replicas of famous buildings, such as that of General Smallwood's home, the original state house, and famous Fort Cumberland.

Such interesting buildings as Washington college, the marine biological laboratory, and the state house, which is the oldest state house in America, were not overlooked when making up the series, for there is a stamp illustrating each of these too.

Poster stamps picturing the Great falls of the Potomac and Deep Creek lake, in Garrett county, famous for gorgeous mountain views, give the stamp collector a glimpse of the scenic wonders of the state, and other stamps illustrating the world's famous Susquehanna duck hunting flats; fox hunting, a traditional Maryland sport; world famous Marlin fishing grounds and steeplechase racing, give the collector an idea of the recreational attractions to be found in the state.

Other stamps represent the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Chesapeake bay, Fort McHenry, historic Antietam battlefield and many other places of interest.

These stamps, which measure approximately 1—¾ by 2—¼ inches, have all been reproduced from actual paintings by a distinguished artist and are printed in three colors, red, yellow and black.

The series can be secured from the Maryland Publicity Commission, State Office building, Annapolis.

Italians, English and Austrians Lead in Signing Up

Forty-two aliens have been registered here and fifty-two others have taken home the necessary forms to be filled out since the registration started, it was reported last night by Frank L. M. Storm who is in charge of the work.

Fourteen of the aliens registered are Italians while nine English and four Austrians have been tabulated. The others are from scattered points of the globe.

Among yesterday's registrants were two Turkish, one Jamaican negro, from the West Indies, and several Russians.

One Russian who applied yesterday spoke the English language fluently, but could not fill out the form because he neither reads nor writes English.

He explained that he came to this country when quite young and had worked hard all his life and never had the time to acquire the ability to read and write. The dilemma was solved when Samuel Barsky of North Mechanic street, this city, offered his services as "interpreter." Mr. Barsky, who speaks English, Polish and Russian told Mr. Storm he would assist in interpreting any time he was called upon.

Several naturalized citizens have come in and asked to have their fingerprints taken for the citizen's file at the F. B. I. office in Washington, D. C., but Mr. Storm explained that he could not undertake the job.

Two Mt. Savage Youths Are Held under Bond On Motor Theft Charge

Two Mt. Savage youths were committed to the county jail and ordered held under $500 bond each for action of the October grand jury when arraigned yesterday in trial magistrate's court on a charge of breaking and entering.

Francis S. Whorton, 17, and James A. Blank, 18, are accused of breaking into the garage of John F. Gallagher, of Mt. Savage, and stealing an automobile motor.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle said the youths admitted the charge.

A third youth, Gerald Blank, will be arraigned later on the same charge, according to authorities.

NAMED PRINCESS — Miss Betty Lee McIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl McIntyre, 623 Sedgewick street, this city, has been selected by Jack Hunter, director of the Berkeley Springs Tomato Festival, to serve in the court of Queen Morgan IV. License Ordinance Will Be Enforced, Trieber Declares

Those Who Do Not Apply Promptly Will Be Arrested, He Says

City police are conducting the most extensive drive in the history of the department to enforce the Cumberland license ordinance, according to Assistant Chief John J. Treiber.

Those who do not apply for licenses within twenty-four hours will be arrested and subject to fine, he said.

Officers on duty in the cruiser cars are making a place-to-place canvass to make sure no one escapes obtaining a license. All business places, regardless of size must have a license to operate.

"The day of coaxing business men to get licenses is past," Assistant Chief Treiber said. "From now on persons will comply with the ordinance or suffer the consequences."

A few of the places that must have licenses to operate are beauty parlors, restaurants, trucking firms, garages, theaters, all stores, shoe shine parlors and numerous others.

The old licenses expired about a month ago.

Virginia Avenue One-way Street Plan Is Opposed

Petitioners Claim Change Would Be Detrimental to Business

Merchants and property owners are opposed to the conversion of Virginia avenue into a one-way thoroughfare, according to the sentiment expressed in a petition which was forwarded yesterday by special messenger to Mayor Harry Irvine at city hall.

The petition containing the names of seventy-six persons declared that such a move would be detrimental to business in that section of the city and the change is unwarranted at this time.

Suggestion that Virginia avenue be made a one-way street was offered by Mayor Irvine at Monday's meeting of the council after City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer told the city fathers that sidewalks could be cut down and the street widened to relieve traffic congestion.

Irvine's plan is to make Virginia avenue one-way and have either Arch or Springdale street handle one-way traffic in the other direction. He opposed the cutting down of sidewalks because it would make them too narrow.

Mrs. Edith Pfeiffer Returns Home from Memorial Hospital

Miss Mary Moyer, 17, of 1313 Virginia avenue; Mrs. Mary L. Rummer, 29, of 927 Gay street, and Mrs. Anna Parker, 31, of 1031 Rolling Mill alley, who were injured Tuesday night in a four-car collision in the subway on Wineow street, were reported "improving" last night at Allegany hospital.

Mrs. Edith B. Pfeiffer, 36, of 755 Maryland avenue, who was believed to be the most seriously hurt, was released from Memorial hospital yesterday.

The drivers of the four cars involved were Robert E. Reger, 10 Thomas street; George W. Rummer, 927 Gay street; Charles A. Alkire, 3 Hay street, and Frederick A. Pfeiffer, 755 Maryland avenue. They were cited to appear Friday in trial magistrates court on charges of reckless driving.
